CITY HALL NEWS

Work in Appleton Street to Be Completed Within Week, Says Mr. Morse

Pawtucket Bridge Roadway in Bad Shape—More Mov-ies on South Common

Appleton street, which has been more or less a cause of complaint for several years because of the condition of the roadway, will be in perfect condition for travel within a week, according to Commissioner Charles J. Morse of the street department. The latest hold-up of the work was the delay of the Bay State Street Railway Co. in paying between the car tracks, but now the Bay State men have started on the work and expect to finish in four or five days.

They have had to put up wooden horses along the trucks to keep traffic off the portion being paved and other debris has kept the street in a more or less shabby condition. However, Commissioner Morse will start his men cleaning off the street tomorrow and by the end of the week everything should be O.K. for travel.

The Pawtucket Bridge

At the present time the roadway over the new Pawtucket bridge is a mass of cinders and very copiously dotted with ruts. The sidewalks and one-time immaculate railings along them have a thick coating of dust and cinders which the wind and passing traffic throw in from the streets. Commissioner Morse says that the question of improving conditions is wholly a matter of time. The Bay State Street Railway is planning to install double car tracks over the structure instead of the single rails that are now there, but they will not be able to do this until next year.

When the new tracks are put in, then the bridge can be paved properly, but if the paving were done now, it would mean that it would all have to be ripped up again when the time came to put in tracks.

Another reason given for the delay in paving is that the grade of the roadway must settle before any permanent paving can be put in. At present the cinders and gravel are settling and that is what is causing the inevitable depressions.

In order to minimize the inconvenience of the dust, Mr. Morse is having the bridge wet down every day and this is helping to offset the unpleasant conditions somewhat.

Marginal Street

Another big job which the street department is working on at present is Marginal street from Wilder street to the power house in Middlesex street. This is being paved with block paving and no base. A lot of heavy traffic for two large industries which are located on the street demands the strongest paving possible and therefore, the gravel which has been on it has been found inadequate to stand the heavy trucking. The street department men have been on the job for three weeks and last week the actual paving work started.

Mayor Thompson has received a request from Mayor Geo. R. Beal of Waltham asking him to fill out a "questionnaire" as to the amount of wages, hours of employment, etc., of various municipal employees.

CROSS OURCQ

Pershing Announces Crossing of River by Americans—Force Enemy Back

Americans Capture Seringes-et-Nes, Sergy and Roncheres

WASHINGTON, July 29.—The crossing of the Ourcq by the American forces in their pursuit of the enemy north of the Marne, was reported in General Pershing's communique for yesterday, received at the war department.

Capture by the Americans of the towns of Seringes-et-Nes, Sergy and Roncheres, beyond the Ourcq, also is announced.

The statement follows:

"Headquarters American Expeditionary Forces, July 28, 1918.

"Section A—North of the Marne, our troops continue the pursuit of the enemy. In spite of his determined efforts to delay their progress by rear guard actions, they have crossed the Ourcq and have taken the towns of Seringes-et-Nes, Sergy and Roncheres.

"Section B—There is nothing to report in this sector."

pal employees. The mayor has forwarded the desired information.

The Boiler Proposition

Commissioner Francis A. Warnock of the buildings department has already made estimates as to the cost of the setting of two boilers in city hall basement and he expects to have further figures as to the actual cost of installing new boilers and an engine to generate power in time for tomorrow's meeting of the municipal council.

Swimming and Swimmers

Yesterday was another big day at the municipal swimming pool on the boulevard and several thousand took advantage of the water. Mayor Thompson has received several more applications for the position of woman swimming instructor but he has not yet made any definite decision. The mayor is planning a series of aquatic events to be held at the pool during the latter part of the season.

More Movies

"Some night" this week, the exact evening to be decided later, there will be a joint community sing and exhibition of movies on the South common. The films for the performance are already on their way to the park commission from Washington, having left the latter city July 23. They will show views of the Canadian northwest and Glacier park and a rip-roaring comedy has also been secured to supplement the more serious phase of the pictures.

Boys Pro Tem

Warren Riordan, assistant county food administrator, is no longer assistant as he is filling the office of Administrator Edward Fisher during the latter's absence.

Last Call For Water Bills

Four o'clock tomorrow afternoon will be the final chance to pay your water bill at the city treasurer's office if you wish to get the 10 per cent discount allowed those who pay their bill on or before July 30. A large number of bills have been paid already but there are still a few out.

HOT WEATHER HARD ON WATER SUPPLY

As a result of the present hot spell, Lowell people are consuming about two million gallons of water every day more than they do when the temperature is normal, according to Commissioner George H. Brown of the water department. Water, like other useful commodities, is beginning to get scarce, and while there is no occasion for alarm, nevertheless, Mr. Brown advises people to waste no more than they are obliged to because there are a great many calls for water for hospitals, wetting down the streets, etc., that have to be answered.

Commissioner Brown had members of the fire department wetting down the territory surrounding all the local hospitals Saturday night and last evening and also the following places: Alken street and Lilley avenue and adjoining sections. Coburn street and Lakeview avenue, Bridge and First streets, Merrimack square and vicinity, including the French street district, Snuckling street, Pine and Westford streets, Middlesex street, Depot square, Liberty square, section near Fletcher and Dutton streets, Broadway and School streets, Pawtucket square and Merrimack and Cabot streets.

These districts will be wet down every evening after sunset as long as the warm spell continues. The youngsters more than enjoy the flushing and the older people also get a lot of benefit from it.

AIRPLANE OVER LOWELL THIS MORNING

What is believed to have been an aeroplane was seen flying high over Lowell at between 4.30 and 5 o'clock this morning. Some of the early risers heard a buzzing sound that was decidedly strange to them, and a little later they discovered a speck in the sky that gradually assumed larger proportions until its outline described that of an aeroplane. Railroad men going out on early trains viewed the aircraft from the Middlesex street depot and it was then barely visible. They said it came from out Chelmsford way and went out towards Billerica, flying high over the carriage shop. The airship was also seen by milkmen and they claim that it came from beyond Chelmsford and from the general direction of Ayer. There are no flying machines at Ayer, however, and the nearest airship activity to Lowell is at Squantum. It has been suggested, and it is barely possible, that it was one of the machines engaged in coast patrol duty that took an inland trip just to break the monotony of U-boat searching.

North of the Marne, the tide of German invasion is ebbing fast. The fact that a general retreat in this region is going on is not questioned and the only question of moment remaining to be cleared up is the location of the position at which the enemy will turn at bay.

Since Saturday morning, there have been important changes in the battle line between Soissons and Rheims. Today it runs almost directly east from Oulchy-le-Chateau to Fere-en-Tardenois, then crosses the Ourcq and continues eastward until it reaches the Dormans-Rheims road northwest of Rheims mountain.

HUNS BURN VILLAGES AS THEY FLEE

Military experts thought that the Germans might stand on the line of the Ourcq river, from which their heavy cannon could dominate the Paris-Chalons railroad along the Marne. This idea is now proved erroneous. It appears that there is no defensive position south of the Vesle river to which the Germans can retire and organize their resistance to allied pressure. The only other defensive position seemingly possible is the one that follows the Aisne and Vesle from Soissons to Fismes and from that point follows the course of the Aisne river toward Rheims. Burning villages along the Aisne and the Vesle from Soissons to Bazoches are reported and tend to confirm the impression that the Germans do not contemplate organized resistance south of that line.

Germans Escape From Trap

There is every indication that the German high command has succeeded in extricating its forces from the trap sprung by General Foch. The resistance of the Germans for a week after the beginning of the allied counter-offensive probably gave them time to withdraw their heavier guns and a large proportion of their supplies from the salient. This resistance was strong along the line south of Soissons as far as Oulchy-le-Ville and west and southwest of Rheims which were the vital sectors of the battle line.

The advance of the allies east of Oulchy-le-Chateau must soon compel the enemy to evacuate the line from the Ourcq river toward Soissons for a considerable distance. Nearer Rheims, however, the Germans seem to hold positions that provide a pivot for their retreat toward the Vesle river.

In this region the Allies this morning were getting close to the Ardre river which forms a protection to the right flank of the enemy positions near Rheims.

Severe Hun Defeat North of Marne

As the situation now stands, the Germans must be considered to have suffered a severe defeat north of the Marne, but it is not a Sedan.

Victory for Australians

While they have been busy getting their forces back out of the bag between Soissons and Rheims, forces farther north have been attacked by the British, once more Australian troops attacking on each side of the Bray-Corbis road, east of Amiens and north of the Somme river. Two lines of German trenches over a two-mile front and 100 prisoners were taken.

This operation is just to the north of Hamel and Villers-Bretonneux, where the Australians and Americans early in July won a local victory. Farther south is the line over which the French have more recently advanced to dominating positions along the Aisne river.

Half of Pocket Cleared

More than half the pocket between the Marne and Vesle rivers has been cleared of Germans, and the allies are driving the enemy still farther north. Important gains are being made by French and Americans on the south and French and British on the east. The German retreat, which is covered by heavy rear guard actions, has been well conducted. Pressure on the

HUNS RETREAT

Germans Continue to Fall Back Along Whole Line—Allies in Pursuit

Allies Advance 3 Miles on 20 Mile Front Since Yesterday—Yankees Push On

LONGON, July 29.—The German retreat is continuing along the whole line, the Allies in pursuit, according to the news from the fighting in the Soissons-Rheims salient received up to noon.

The Germans have succeeded in checking to a certain extent, but not in stopping the French advance.

The French are on the north bank of the Ourcq, and to the east they have secured the whole road between Rheims and Dormans. The Germans are stubbornly resisting and are burning villages.

Since yesterday the Allies have advanced between two and three miles on a 20 mile front.

The enemy has definitely abandoned the line of the Ourcq and there is little doubt now that he will go back beyond the Vesle to the line 50 miles long between Soissons and Rheims, which is probably well entrenched and has good lines of communication.

The German retirement has been quite orderly and deliberate. So far the taking of only four guns has been reported.

The Americans, particularly in the Fere-en-Tardenois sector, are pressing the Germans vigorously.

Heavy fighting is still in progress in the neighborhood of Bazancourt. So far the French have made no progress there. Villages between Soissons and Bazancourt, about 14 miles to the east, however, are on fire, leading to the belief that some burning villages are a further retreat.

DON'T READ THIS TILL AFTER SUNDOWN

"How hot is it?"

"Well, it's 108 in the sun and 90 in the shade."

Thus spoke the Locks and Canals at 1.30 this afternoon and no mortal speaks with greater veracity than the thermometers of the L. & C. people. What they say is final.

"Is that worse than yesterday?" we asked. Of course, we knew it had to be worse than anything yet recorded this year, but hearken to the complacent voice on the other end of the line:

"Well, no, it was about as bad yesterday. It was 95 in the shade at 3 o'clock. It will be just as bad today unless the wind changes."

So there you are. Today and yesterday are in a neck-and-neck race to see who can get the more hot-headed. There was a consoling breeze today that failed to put in a very audible appearance yesterday and this relieved matters somewhat.

Thermometers all over the city and in the outlying sections reported all sorts of heat records and one had to agree with the reports if only to keep the tale-bearers in good nature.

The weather man says that showers are coming this evening and for that 130,000 Lowell voices will go up in fervent prayer for that individual. The clouds banked up for a while yesterday but there was nothing doing in the way of moisture.

The parks and beaches were filled to capacity and automobilists say that there were a record-breaking number of accidents on the road owing to the large number who were out trying to escape the heat.

An enflaming bombardment of great violence.

Americans Gain 18 Miles in Ten Days

From west to east the allied line now runs from Oulchy-le-Chateau along the northern bank of the Ourcq to Fere, thence through Sergy and Goussancourt to south of Ville to Bligny. North of Oulchy and north of Bligny the Germans have maintained their positions stoutly despite the steady hammering of the allies. Sergy, held by the Americans, represents an advance of 18 miles from Chateau-Thierry in 10 days. The forward movement Sunday, was as great as five miles at some points, but averaged slightly more than two miles along the front from Oulchy to Bligny.

Tanks Protect Allied Forces

While the enemy loss in men may not be great, the allies probably will continue on Low Page

RETURN TO WORK

Several Thousand Strikers Answer Invitation of General Electric Co. at Lynn

Disorder at Gates—Police Obligated to Use Clubs and Guns—Man Injured

LYNN, July 29.—Several thousand of the employees of the General Electric Co., who have been on strike went to work today upon invitation of the company. Crowds gathered in front of the factory gates, and after strike pickets had tried to persuade the men not to return, there was some disorder. The police were obliged to use clubs in several instances, and one was so severely injured that he was taken to a hospital.

The strike has seriously crippled important war work. State and federal mediators have failed to adjust the differences and a committee of the strikers was in Washington today to ask the War Labor board to intercede. In opening the gates, factory officials promised employees that they would be taken back without prejudice.

Shots Are Fired

Later a detachment of police charged the crowd at the River Works plant, and firing a number of shots toward the ground, forced the strikers back. Through the lane made by the police the employees entered the factory. A score or more young women employed in the offices of the company fainted inside the mill gates and were taken to their homes. One man was injured and taken to a hospital and seven men and one woman were arrested. There was only minor trouble at the other plant of the company in West Lynn.

WORK OF TANKS BIG FACTOR IN ADVANCE

PARIS, July 28.—In an official statement issued this afternoon the French War Office says:

"Since the opening of the artillery bombardment on July 13, the day of the French counter-offensive on the front between the Aisne and the Marne our tanks have taken a glorious part in the battle. After piercing the enemy lines and enabling the infantry to enter the breach they have not ceased to accompany or precede the troops.

"Throughout the battle the tanks have given proof of their ability to maneuver and of their incomparable audacity. The crews drove the tanks into the hottest part of the battle and recoiled from no obstacles. They attacked the centers of resistance and the batteries of the enemy under terrific fire from machine guns and special German cannon.

"Their gallantry attained the greatest results. Each tank accounted for 15 or 20 German machine guns. Some of the tanks charged the German batteries, putting the gunners out of action and insuring the capture of the cannon and material.

"The losses sustained by the Germans as a result of the onslaught of the tanks were very high, according to the reports of prisoners.

"From July 18 to July 23 the tanks took part every day in the attack. Most of them were in action twice and some returned to the fight four or five times in the same day. Some tank companies fought for three full days. Drivers operated their tanks for 30 hours in the two-day period of July 18-19."

M'ADOO'S WAGE AWARD TO BE PAID SOON

WASHINGTON, July 28.—To all of you two million odd employees of the railroads of America who have been wondering when you were going to get your back pay under McAdoo's wage award, this word:

Just as soon as the clerks of the various railroads can figure out what is due you.

Doubtless some of the roads have already begun making payments, but up to date the great bulk probably have not. Members of the railroad administration explained to me that it is just about the end of the biggest computation jobs this country has ever known.

Director General McAdoo recently issued an order directing all the roads to give the men their current increased pay at once, beginning June 1, and by now all have complied. As to the payment of back salary he made the following order:

"As promptly as possible the amount due by back pay from January 1, 1918, in accordance with the wage agreement, will be computed and payment made to employees separately from the regular monthly payments, so that the employees will know the exact amount of these back payments. Recognizing the clerical work necessary to make these computations for back pay and the probable delay before the entire production can be covered, each month beginning with January, shall be computed as soon as practicable, and as soon as completed, payment shall be made."

New questions are constantly arising in connection with the wage order. Only recently McAdoo made two new rulings. He ordered that for positions created since December, 1915, the salaries will be readjusted so as to conform to the basis established in the wage order for positions of similar scope or responsibility.

Miss Detroit II.

SPEED! SPEED! SPEED!

Running 15 miles in less than 15 minutes Miss Detroit II in a regatta at Put-in-Bay, O., has again established her supremacy as the queen of all speed water crafts.

Miss Detroit II is a hydroplane built by a Detroit millionaire on plans decided on after half a dozen designs had been tried and found wanting. The first five miles of the course was covered in 4:11, a rate of a mile in 36 4-5 seconds, believed to be a record for speed boats.

It is not so long ago that a mile a minute was considered impossible for water craft and it was not until the hydroplane type was invented that it was proved that this extreme speed was attainable.

The boats are built to eliminate practically all water resistance, the body of the boat leaving the water when extreme speed is reached.

SOCIAL INSURANCE AND PUBLIC OWNERSHIP

Speaking on the social insurance questions and government ownership or operation at the constitutional convention, Friday, John W. Daly, a Lowell delegate, said:

Mr. President and Gentlemen of the Convention:

The chairman of the committee on social insurance, the gentleman from Worcester, in his opening remarks on a former stage of this resolution, said there were two things for the convention to consider: First, as to the power of the general court, under the constitution, to legislate upon any of these propositions. Second, if it be decided in the negative, should such a power be granted?

My interpretation of his second query is that should it be decided either way—that is, as to whether or not the general court has such power—then does the necessity exist, or is it likely to arise even in the remote future, that would warrant granting such power? It is from this phase of the question that I should like to present my views.

First, I consider it proper at this point, to say that I have been identified with the insurance business for the past eight years and although I intend to make the business my life work, I assure you that anything I may say will be without prejudice and from a practical working knowledge of conditions.

I am not opposed to the fundamental principles of certain forms of compulsory, contributory, non-contributory, unemployment, health, insurance and old age pensions, nor to any individual or collective thought or action formulated with the intention of aiding and improving the conditions of the wage-earner.

And I believe in a gradual extension of the principle of public ownership of certain utilities, when it is shown conclusively, that private efforts fail to create and maintain a condition of justice and such social relationships as are responsive to the needs of the times.

When the government shall demonstrate ability to conduct certain public utilities for the public good, with better results than they are being conducted by some of our great private enterprises, and private efforts fail to achieve certain requirements, then has government, in a democracy, justification for stepping in with its own machinery and replacing private action? Under such circumstances, would a movement for state control be sound and within the range of practical achievement?

My personal study and investigation of this question, since becoming a member of this convention, has not convinced me that the time has yet come when the state should absorb, interfere with, or compete against the institutions that are honestly endeavoring to, and are so successfully meeting the requirements that the advocates of social insurance declare are so timely.

This question is so far-reaching and of such vital importance, that it deserves and should have the most careful study and investigation.

My experience has shown me that there are some, a great many in fact, who, because of indifference, prejudice or a misconception of their duties to their families, do not take advantage of the many opportunities offered them, in the most convenient form, to provide for their dependents and also to provide a competency for themselves in their old age. All such should, in my opinion, be made to realize the obligation they owe to themselves, their dependents and to society.

Campaign of Education

In this respect, I firmly believe a thorough constructive campaign of education pointing out the essentials necessary for the maintenance of good health and their right relationship to the community's well being and making the application to the conformity of such teaching voluntary, will be far more effective than to have the state step in and say, "This or that must be done," when in the opinion of those affected it should not be done unless so dictated by their own conscience.

I understand, of course, that we are not considering legislative enactment—that this is not a legislative body. If it was a question of allowing people to decide whether they should have state insurance, I would favor it, but it is not such a question. It is a question of conferring upon the general court the constitutional power to legislate upon such matters, should it, in its wisdom and judgment, consider it necessary for the convenience and safety of the public.

I believe that any action of this body might influence legislation in behalf of state insurance is unnecessary because the state already has that power.

Assuming that the question at issue is: "Has the state such authority?" the committee, in its report, quoting from bulletin No. 15, makes this significant statement: "In view of the recent federal decisions it is obvious that 'constitutional rigorism' is at an end, that the 14th amendment to the constitution of the United States does not stand in the way of state legislation respecting the various forms of insurance. It further states, 'Of course, the question still remains whether such measures are in violation of the provisions of the constitution of Massachusetts. In view of the fact that there is no restriction prohibiting such legislation in the constitution of Massachusetts, when it is believed by many that if there was such a restriction it would not be operative, because it would be in direct violation of the 14th amendment to the federal constitution, designed not to interfere with the police power of the state and intended to prescribe regulations, to promote the health, peace and prosperity of the people.'"

Its provisions are broad and specific, its interpretations, in opinions by justices of the higher courts and by decisions of the Federal Supreme court itself, are clear and definite.

When you consider that their economic theories have the sanction of law, that the police power extends to all the public needs, that the courts recognize that public sentiment must make law and that courts must interpret the law in accordance with the spirit of the times, it must be obvious that the state has such power.

As I understand it, in the states where there are no constitutional provisions, the matter may be regulated entirely by statute.

The claim is made by the advocates of social insurance, that a great amount of sickness and a high death-rate prevail among American wage-earners and that existing accident cannot provide adequate relief. If this is true and it is found that legislative operation and compulsion is necessary as a remedy, then any measure intended to permit insurance legislation, merits serious consideration.

However, the available statistics and every reliable health survey and estimate made in this country indicate that health conditions here, without health insurance, are as good and in many instances are much better, than in countries where such laws have been in operation for years.

cluding Boston, estimated an average of from 6 to 815 days annually for sickness disability. In Germany and Austria, in 1913, after more than 20 years of social insurance, sickness disability averaged 9.19 and 9.45 respectively. Statistics also show that the mortality of the countries with no compulsory health insurance laws is lower than in countries where health insurance laws have been in force for years.

When you consider carefully the recent rapid strides made in social insurance by private enterprises, you can readily see how great the improvement has been. Take for instance, the most recent and modern system of protection. It is known as group life insurance. It is a development of insurance whereby a number of lives are covered by a single blanket policy. It may be regarded as wholesale insurance with decreased overhead expenses and will, undoubtedly, stabilize labor and capital eventually.

It is intended and expected to establish employment on a more permanent basis and to promote more friendly relations between employer and employee. It is either contributory or non-contributory.

Provides Protection

The contributory plan brings about an automatic saving of money, enabling the members to systematically and easily accumulate savings and to provide for old age by creating a pension fund. It provides protection for the dependents of members and it may be so written that the pay envelope will continue to come to the family, in whole or in part for number of years following the death of the wage-earner.

It enables an employer to provide a pension fund for his employees who retire after a certain length of service. This form of policy may cover all employees of any person, firm or corporation. It may be used to create endowments for churches, colleges, etc. And it further provides that in the case of an insured becoming totally and permanently disabled before attaining a certain age, the premium charge will be waived and the amount of insurance paid to the insured in installments.

Although this plan of insurance is somewhat new and yet in the experimental stage, its many virtues are being quickly recognized by those who employ a large number of people. Already some of the larger manufacturing concerns of the country, realizing that the success of their business depends to a very great extent, on the efficiency and loyalty of their employees, have, after considerable study and investigation as to the best and proper method of showing their appreciation of their loyalty, have taken advantage of this opportunity and are providing their employees with this form of protection.

When you consider the question carefully, impartially, and without prejudice you must realize the fact that the development and achievement of our American insurance companies and their concern for the welfare of the public are consistent with the principles of American ideals and democratic institutions.

One company in particular, the largest in this country, and perhaps in the world, has entered upon a great work for the benefit of its policy holders entirely beyond any obligations implied in its policy contracts.

It has taken place among the foremost agencies in the conservation of human life, having carried on a campaign of education in the interests of improved health. It has established a free nursing service for all industrial policy holders whose circumstances are such that they need it. It has also engaged systematically in welfare work, along the lines of modern thought, among the millions of industrial workers who are its policy holders.

A wonderful change has taken place during the last 15 years in the development of this business. Since the purification of American insurance in 1905 by the Armstrong Investigation committee of the New York legislature, the highest point of efficiency in agency and financial management has been reached.

CAPTURED AMERICANS AT MANNHEIM

GENEVA, Sunday, July 28. (By the Associated Press.)—Thirty-two Americans, including some officers, recently captured by the Germans, have been lodged near the railroad station at Mannheim, in Baden, on the Rhine, according to a report received in Basle. They were placed in this position in order to prevent allied air raids.

The local evening newspaper is the paper that reaches the home when the whole family is there to read it. The Sun fills this field in Lowell.

NEWS OF THE CHURCHES

Next Friday will be the first Friday of the month and will be observed with the usual services by the local Catholic churches. Special masses in the morning and holy hour devotions in the evening will form the nucleus of the observance. Confessions will be heard Thursday afternoon and evening. Congregations at all the masses at the Catholic churches of the city were asked to pray yesterday for the repose of the souls of the Lowell boys whose deaths in France were reported last week.

St. Patrick's
Rev. Joseph L. Curtin celebrated the late mass at St. Patrick's church yesterday. At the early mass the young boys of the parish went to communion. The usual first Friday services will be held this week.

Immaculate Conception
The O.M.I. Cadets, tanned and hearty after their week's encampment at Milligan's grove, Wilmington, returned to their home barracks late yesterday afternoon with the news that the 321st encampment was the best ever held. The young soldiers passed a most enjoyable week under the direction of Rev. Denis A. Sullivan, O.M.I., their spiritual director; Maj. Joseph F. Boyd, Jr., their commanding officer, and "Matt" McCann, physical director. Rev. James McGarrin, O.M.I., celebrated the late mass yesterday.

St. Peter's
Rev. Peter Linehan celebrated the late mass at St. Peter's church yesterday and the pastor, Rev. Daniel J. Keher, F.H.D., made the announcements. The Immaculate Conception sodality will receive communion in a body at the 7.30 o'clock mass next Sunday. The usual first Friday services will be held with masses at 5 and 7 o'clock.

Sacred Heart
Rev. John P. Flynn, O.M.I., the pastor, celebrated the 11 o'clock mass at the Sacred Heart church yesterday. The Children of Mary received communion in a body at the 8.30 o'clock mass. The Children of Mary Red Cross chapter will meet Tuesday evening for sewing in the parish school. Masses on Friday will be at 5, 6, 7 and 8 o'clock. This morning a requiem mass in memory of the late Private Francis M. McOsker, who was killed in France, was celebrated at 9 o'clock.

St. Columba's
The usual masses were celebrated at St. Columba's church yesterday. Rev. Patrick J. Hally, the pastor, celebrated the early mass and a large number of the faithful received communion.

St. Margaret's
Rev. Fr. Brock, S.J., celebrated the late mass at St. Margaret's church yesterday morning. Rev. Charles J.

Galligan, the pastor, celebrated the early mass.

Lakeview Chapel
Rev. Michael C. Gilbride celebrated the 10 o'clock mass at Lakeview chapel yesterday and there was a very large attendance. A musical program was carried out with John F. McGlinchey at the organ and the soloists were Miss Margaret McDonough and John T. Baxter.

Calvary Baptist
The usual services were held at the Calvary Baptist church. The topic for the morning service was, "The Great Revival Needed," and "The Coming Golden Age," was the sermon for the evening, preached by the pastor, Rev. Asa Reed Ditts.

Chelmsford Street Baptist
Rev. Elmer F. West, the pastor, was the speaker at the morning service at the Chelmsford Street Baptist church yesterday. At noon the regular session of the bible school was held. The usual evening service was held and a feature was singing by the Young People's chorus. The weekly prayer meeting will be held tomorrow evening at 7.30.

Fifth Street Baptist
Rev. George E. Marston, the pastor, was the speaker at the morning service at the Fifth Street Baptist church yesterday. His topic was, "No other burden." Music by a quartette was a feature. "The Call for a Guide," was the topic at the evening service. Miss Rhoda Witham and Ernest Ingle sang a duet entitled, "Love Divine." Rev. Mr. Marston will be away all next month and the deacons will have charge of the services.

First Baptist
Rev. A. G. Warner, assistant pastor, spoke at the morning service, at the First Baptist church. His topic was, "A Mighty Means of Influence." He also spoke at the evening service, his topic being, "The Blessings of Youth." Musical programs were carried out at each service.

Immanuel Baptist
Rev. D. J. Hatfield, the pastor, spoke on "Sin Separates" at the morning service at the Immanuel Baptist church yesterday. The usual service of the Sunday school was held, with a fair attendance. The customary evening service was also held.

Palke Street Baptist
"Helping the Other Fellow" was the subject of Rev. Earl T. Pavro's morning sermon at the Paige St. Baptist church. Rev. Mr. Pavro also spoke at the evening service, and a special musical program was carried out. Mr. Pavro starts on his vacation this week.

and Rev. Mr. Collins, from the Gordon Bible college will preach during his absence.

Worthington and Central M.E.
The Worthington Street Baptist and Worthington Street Methodist Episcopal and Central Methodist Episcopal churches held a union service yesterday morning at the Worthington Street Baptist church with Rev. W. C. Towns in the pulpit. His subject was "Paul the Apostle." In the evening, the services were held at the Central church and Mr. Townsend spoke on "The Christian with Back Bone."

Christian Science
Both Christian Science churches held their regular services yesterday, and the topic of the morning was "Truth." Congregational Union Services
Union services of the Elliot Congregational, Highland Congregational and Kirk Street churches were held yesterday morning and evening at the Highland Congregational church. Next Sunday and the Sunday following, the services will be held at the First Congregational church, which will be included in the union services during the month of August.

Pilgrim Chapel
This church will conduct morning services only during the summer months. At the service yesterday, Rev. Steven Vaites preached on "Searching the Scriptures." Mr. Woodhams, pastor of the Worthington Street Baptist church, will speak at the Wednesday evening meeting.

St. Anne's Episcopal
Rev. Appleton Grannis, the pastor, spoke at the morning service at St.

There was singing by the regular choir, also by the Guild of St. Cecilia. Rev. Mr. Grannis will conduct the morning services again next Sunday. The candidates' class of the Girls Friendly will hold no more Friday afternoon meetings until September. The Camp Fire girls will go for a week's outing at Massapug pond, about the last week in August. Arrangements are being made now and a meeting will be held at the parish house on Thursday at 7.30 and all interested are invited to attend.

St. John's Episcopal
Rev. James Bancroft, the pastor, at the morning service, at St. John's Episcopal church yesterday, took his text from Deut. 12:10 "And Now O, Israel, What Doth the Lord, thy God, Require of Thee." There was also a short address at the evening service.

Jewish Synagogues
The usual exercises and services were held at the Jewish Synagogues on Saturday.

Swedish Lutheran
Rev. Peter E. Nordgren, the pastor, spoke on "Christ or the World," at the morning service at the Swedish Lutheran church, yesterday. In the evening his topic was, "Labor, Love and Hope." The Birthday society will meet next Wednesday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Borge in Chelmsford.

Highland M.E.
"Turn Not Aside from the Path" was the topic of Rev. R. W. Hutchinson's address at the Highland Methodist Episcopal church yesterday morning.

St. Paul's M.E.
Rev. J. L. Cairns, the pastor, spoke on "Thou Knowest Not Now," at the morning service at St. Paul's Methodist church, yesterday. Bible school was held at noon.

First Primitive Methodist
Rev. N. W. Matthews pastor, preached at the First Primitive Methodist church, on Sunday morning to a good sized audience. The choir gave good service in the musical portion. The pastor's theme was, "The Living Church and Membership." Matt. 5:16, "Let your light so shine that men may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

Rev. Mr. Matthews states that the times were never more urgent than the present for the church to rise to her great opportunities in the fulfillment of her mission to the world.

Much depends upon fidelity to God. Rev. Dr. Grannis preached in the evening service to a good gathering. He discussed the element of fear in the progress of mankind in all departments of life. This church will continue its regular services morning and evening through the summer.

Lawrence Street Primitive Methodist
"Hiding from God" was the topic of the sermon preached by Rev. John Singleton, pastor of the Lawrence Street Primitive Methodist church, yesterday morning. The evening service was in the form of a short talk on "The Perils of the Christian Life," Gal. 3:1. Next Saturday afternoon the Girl Scouts are planning to go to Crowders Ferry, where they will be the guests of the Girl Scouts of St. George church of Methuen. They will be in charge of Mrs. Jos. Spencer.

First Presbyterian
Rev. J. M. Craig, preached at the First Presbyterian church yesterday morning in the absence of the pastor, Rev. J. B. Kennedy. His topic was, "Hope for the Fallen." Last evening he spoke on "Duty of the Citizen to the State and of the State to the Citizen." This service was held at the Westminster church, in the form of a union meeting.

PREVENT STRIKE
Seamen and Firemen on Great Lakes Yield to Chairman Hurley's Appeal

Latter Orders Carriers' Association to Meet Certain Demands of Men

WASHINGTON, July 29.—Orders calling off the threatened strike of seamen and firemen on the Great Lakes, set for today, were issued yesterday by Victor A. Olander, secretary of the Sailors' union of the Great Lakes, and other union leaders, following a conference with Chairman Hurley of the shipping board.

The decision to call off the strike followed a two-hour conference between the union leaders and officers of the shipping board. It was pointed out again to the men that a tieup of lake shipping would interrupt food shipments to the soldiers overseas, in addition to hampering war operations through interference with the movement of coal and ore.

The union men protested against any modification of the nation's appeal, for men for merchant ships, which the Lake Carriers' association Saturday had agreed to sign if changed to apply to the Atlantic and the Gulf. Mr. Olander asserted such modification would exempt the lake shipowners and insisted that a change would make the strike situation more serious.

Insistence by union leaders on this point was met by Mr. Hurley sending to William Livingston, president of the association, this telegram: "United States shipping board, hereby directs the members of the Lake Carriers' association as an association to sign the nation's appeal for men to man its merchant ships as originally drafted and without any changes."

The other complaint of the men that the registration of seamen at the association's shipping offices or assembly rooms permitted the shipowners to discriminate against the men and compel them to join the association was met by Mr. Hurley asking that the practice be suspended pending further negotiations.

Independent shipowners on the Great Lakes and the unions were called upon by Mr. Hurley to send representatives to Washington next Wednesday for a conference on the pending wage demands of seamen, firemen and stewards.

Plans Re-establishment of Imperial Regime in Russia Under Duke Nicholas

AMSTERDAM, July 29.—The recent monarchist congress at Kiev resolved to form centers throughout Russia for the re-establishment of the imperial regime on the lines of the Ukraine and Great Russian and under Grand Duke Nicholas Nikolaevitch, according to brief details received here. Kiev newspapers report a recrudescence of the activities of the Black Hundred.

When confirmation of the death of the former emperor was received in Kiev, many Russian officers were seen with crepe wound about their crosses of St. George. When his execution was first denied a crowded thanksgiving service was held in the Kiev cathedral and the people sang the ancient hymn: "God, Protect the Czar." The archpriest during the celebration of the mass declared: "The church stands outside politics but it is besetting all true believing Russians to pray for Nicholas, the servant of God."

He spoke of the impending re-establishment of the monarchy and the dynasty. After the service there was bloody fighting in the streets of Kiev between the monarchists and bolsheviks.

DROWNING ACCIDENT AT LAKEVIEW
Another fatality was added to the season's drowning accidents Saturday afternoon, the place being Lake Massapug near Willow Dale, and the victim Robert J. Blakely, aged 21, of 20 Apple street, Lowell.

Blakely, in company with Heve Jacques of 7 Dempsey place and George Flanders of 592 Graham street, was spending his afternoon canoeing, and all went well until the water became so rough that the canoe capsized.

Blakely seemed unable to swim, and the best efforts put forth to save him by his companions, only resulted in failure. The patrol was summoned, and Inspector Martin Maher arrived with the pulmotor, but his efforts to revive Blakely were of no avail. The body was viewed by Medical Examiner T. B. Smith, after which it was taken to the undertaking rooms of George W. Healey in this city.

Blakely was a Lowell resident, and was employed as gauging inspector at the South Lowell plant of the U. S. Cartridge Co. He had just been called in the draft, and resided with his wife, Martha, and his mother, Nora F. His father, James Blakely, who is well known here as a blacksmith, and a Spanish War veteran, is now serving with the Canadian army in France.

AN INSULT TO OUR ARMY

Much comment has been caused throughout the country by the plank adopted by the New York republican convention on universal military training. It appears that in this part of the platform the writer went out of his way to reflect upon the military forces of the United States, including General Pershing, General March and other able and conscientious men identified with the regular army. The military plank is as follows:—

"We call upon the United States government to establish without delay a well ordered system of universal military training for national service. A free nation must be defended by its own men. For democracy to hire mercenaries to fight its battles is as grotesque as it would be to hire mercenaries to cast its vote."

To hint that Gen. Pershing, Gen. Scott, Gen. March, or any of the other devoted West Pointers who have built up our volunteer regular army are mere mercenaries is an insult to the men who bear the responsibility of defending the nation in time of war.

The republicans of New York must have been hard up for campaign issues since they had to resort to such extreme language. In military history the word "mercenary" is applied to the bands of soldiers whose military services are sold to hard pressed monarchies at a stated price. In this light there is nothing mercenary in the present system under which military necessity has caused the government to adopt the selective draft. As for the compensation provided for the drafted soldiers, surely the republicans do not think it is so liberal as to justify a term so insulting as "mercenary."

The New York republicans, it would seem, are pressing today for the adoption of the Prussian military system in this country, but it may be that after the war, the volunteer regular army will suffice for national defense, whether in the opinion of republicans they are mercenaries, although by the people of the United States they are understood to be patriots who have volunteered to give their lives, if necessary, in defense of the flag.

There is a degree of snobbery in this plank of the republican platform that should meet an emphatic rebuff from the self-respecting citizens of New York state. Neither Gen. Pershing nor any of the other West Point men, nor even the rank and file of the army, regular or drafted, can in any degree be characterized as mercenaries; and hence this epithet will be hurled back in the face of its authors as an insult to the men who are laying down their lives on the altar of patriotism for the vindication of American rights and the freedom of the world.

INTERVENTION IN RUSSIA

President Wilson has at last consented to intervention in Russia and as he was criticised for delay in declaring war, so will he now be criticised for delay in agreeing to such intervention.

President Wilson, however, knows what he is doing. He has sources of information which the public has not and hence those who criticize him in this respect will do so blindly.

The president waited because it was necessary to wait until the Russian people would have time to realize that the Bolshevik regime does not represent the Russian people, but on the contrary appears to be working in the interests of Germany.

There is then the question whether the Soviets represent the people; but they are under the influence of the Bolshevik elements. In the Russian municipalities the Zemstvos in their local and district bodies do represent the people, as do the Constituent assembly, also suppressed by the Bolshevik government. Where the municipalities and the Zemstvos have been suppressed, they should be re-established, as representing the people. By co-operating with these bodies, the Allies can help Russia to drive out the enemies of freedom and establish democratic government.

It is believed the plans adopted by President Wilson for bringing aid to the Russian people, will have the desired effect without giving Germany an opportunity to mislead them into the belief that the Japanese and Americans enter as invaders. The move is one of essential importance in saving Russia from German oppression. It is plain from the terms of peace recently put out by Russia that her intention is to exploit that nation for her own benefit. That is something the allies will never permit, even though their insistence upon the rights of Russia should prolong the war.

TELEGRAPH AND TELEPHONE

Now that the government has taken over the telegraph and telephone wires, the obvious thing to do is what heretofore the government would not permit private owners to do—organize competing systems into one system.

Two wire systems in a city are merely a source of confusion and expense. Under private ownership there was public objection to consolidation because in too many cases competing telephone companies wanted to include in new capitalization all the water in both stocks, and make the public pay interest on it.

Now there is the chance to consolidate on actual value without robbing anybody. With the wire system the expense and confusion of making a show of competition can be eliminated. There is the possibility also of substituting the scientific automatic phone for the manual phone. By proper management, it may be possible to put a phone in every home with service at a penny a call. That, however, would not be possible under present conditions of the labor market, if the cost of labor and material be considered. The government as a rule has to pay high prices for both. But very likely the first change the public will appreciate in towns having two phone systems will be the connection of the two switchboards so that a person having one phone can call up anybody else having either phone. Once the people try out the new plan, they will never again stand for the old.

TRIBUTE TO OUR SOLDIERS

In a special despatch to the New York World, Col. Repington, the British military critic, pays a high compliment to the fighting qualities of our American troops when he says that "second only to the depression of German morale, I count the famous fighting of the new American troops as the most splendid encouragement of the past week." This critic points out that there could be no doubt as to the eminent fighting ability of the first American divisions that landed in France; but the relative inexperience of the later arrivals left the question open to doubt; yet even these, says this expert, "have shown that they can fight like tigers and obey orders and remain disciplined."

Our American troops have been sent across in masses in response to appeals from the Allies, but this critic expresses the opinion which, we believe is timely and sound, that it would be a very grave mistake if through enthusiasm or impatience in the cause of the allies, these new divisions were rushed into battle without the proper training, necessary to make them fit for the terrific warfare now in progress in France. Col. Repington believes it would be a mistake to waste this great American asset in a premature offensive on a large scale.

As General Foch is still without the preponderance of well trained troops to justify a great offensive, there is a great temptation to draw prematurely upon the new arrivals from the United States, not over one-half of whom have completed the necessary training. It is presumed, however, that General Foch, always careful of his men, will not call for the rest of the American troops until such time as they have gone through the realistic training behind the lines to enable them to cope with all the deceptive devices and strategies of German warfare.

WORK OR FIGHT

Premier Lloyd George of England has thrown down the gauntlet to the thousands of strikers who have left the munition factories. He has done only what the vital interests of the empire demand, in announcing that if the men are idle today they will be drafted forthwith for service in the war.

Why should one set of men be privileged to go idle in order to compel concessions sometimes unreasonable, while others are obliged to sacrifice their lives in defense of the nation?

"They have ceased work," says the premier, "not in pursuance of a trade dispute, but in an endeavor to force the government to change a national policy essential to the prosecution of the war."

These strikers have been granted exemption from military service because their labor in the munition factories was considered of greater value to the government. If these services are terminated, then naturally the exemption they carried is also terminated. The premier has taken the right stand. While the nation is fighting for its existence, it cannot afford to put up with any such nonsense as strikes, which would paralyze the factories on which the army and navy must depend for the munitions of war. If the war continues much longer with its present fury, the United States government may have to adopt the same policy.

OUR WAR HEROES

It appears that our Lowell boys have been in the hot of the fight as they have always been whenever the country has needed their services.

Already five of our boys have been reported as killed in action in the recent operations in France, and undoubtedly the list will grow as the months go by and the titanic struggle progresses. Corp. Joseph Worth, Privates, Francis McOsker, Philip Chalfoux, Arthur McOsker and Frank Lyons have laid down their lives in the cause of freedom while the list of wounded will undoubtedly include a number of Lowell soldiers.

To the bereaved families the sympathy of this city goes out in full measure. Few there are who can realize what all this means until some such loss comes home to themselves.

We see many homes displaying the service flags with stars indicating the number of men who have left those homes for service in the war. We fear that many of these flags will hereafter show golden stars to mark the homes which have given martyrs to the cause of world freedom. If the struggle continues for a year or two years, we must expect the sacrifices to be exceedingly great. Yet this cannot be helped. There is no other way of saving the freedom of our own land and at the same time extending that freedom to the entire world.

Lumping Them Off

A tiny Kokomo girl has made it her custom to enumerate by name all the members of the family and the close friends, in her evening prayers, but at the close of a strenuous day of play last week she was tired, and after the opening petition she yawned, then added sleepily: "And please just bless the whole bunch."—Indianapolis News.

Historical Data

Little Johnny, who had been studying history but a short time, thought he would give his grandfather a tryout on the subject, and asked: "Say, gramp, what great war broke out in 1530?"

The old gentleman laid down his paper and looked thoughtfully at the boy for a moment, and then a sudden light dawned upon him. "Why," he said, "that was the year I married your grandmother."—Harper's Magazine.

The Wise Witness

Appropos of a celebrated dynamite case in San Francisco, lawyers are telling me of the experience of a prosecuting attorney who encountered a somewhat difficult witness. Finally he asked the man if he was acquainted with any of the men on the jury.

"Yes, sir," announced the witness, "more than half of them."

"Are you willing to swear that you know more than half of them?" demanded the lawyer. "Why, if it comes to that, I'm willing to swear that I know more than all of them put together."—Pittsburg Chronicle Telegraph.

The Statesman

The statesman has broadminded views On all things, East and West. Ask him to air them; he'll be glad. To grant your shy request. At setting forth his views he'll say: "Was never known to balk; And those who know him best all think He really likes to talk. The statesman seeks his country's good. And some good for himself. He hopes his dear constituents Won't lay him on the shelf. He studies public questions hard And then sometimes he does just as The politicians do before. The statesman we should all admire As much as he deserves; Of course not when perchance he from City hall of duty swerves. He proudly plods his ponderous way Up to eternal fame. And then, sometimes, when he is gone The world forgets his name."—Somerville Journal.

Honor's Roll

When all is said and done you've got to hand a lot of credit for the good war food showing to the several hundred thousand American girls and boys who belong to pig and poultry clubs. In the agricultural districts of all states these clubs may be found, the boys running the pig clubs and the girls increasing the meat and egg supply with their poultry clubs. It is estimated that the boys' pig clubs have not only increased this year's pork production but have given the big American ham and bacon industry a decided boost. Next generation's farmers will grow better hogs because they belong to pig clubs now. That means more meat for city eaters. A year or so ago Hoover urged every person who could to grow a pig, and farmers to grow more than they ever did before. That was the quickest way of increasing the nation's meat supply, and meat we must have if we are going to work our hardest here at home and fight our best over there. The response was heavy. But the largest portion of the increase is directly due to the efforts of the farm girls and boys and their pig and poultry clubs. So, it is altogether proper that you give me a thought and a bit of mental thanks when you eat your ham and—your breakfast bacon.

Was Pershing's Mammy

Back in Laclede, Mo., when John Pershing was just a little chap they called her "Black Bettle Lewis." Now, it seems, she is Mrs. Gillingham, having married since leaving the old town that gave birth to America's field commander to come to Kansas City and engage in housework and washing. She remembers John quite well. His mother wasn't a strong woman, and the negro servants who worked in the Pershing home had many tasks in connection with the children. Bettle is not much of a reader. She knew that John was in the army, but she hadn't heard just what his rank was or where he was stationed. Even after she was told she did not appear to be impressed. "I sure slapped that boy many a times," she said with a grin. "He was full of tricks—O, he was! Always something all the time. His mother Jim was more blonde and quiet, like his mother, but John was a terror. "One time he made a little sled and coasted it down hill right smash into me—on purpose. But you couldn't make nothing off John. If you slapped him he'd hit you back—yes, he would. If I slapped him today, maybe he'd bust me tomorrow. I don't care how little a slap it was he'd get it back on you."

"And tease—O my soul! He used to sing a colored folks song just to get me mad; something about coming from the cotton and the corn. I can't exactly remember it, but it sure used to make me mad, and he knewed it."

"Black Bettle" reflected. It was many years ago. She is an old woman now, but still working out. Slowly a grin resolved itself into a chuckle. "Said one time he'd kill me—sure did. Used to call me nigger. O, he was full of tricks. Used to wash him and dress him and put him to bed and get him up and send him to school. Used to fight and kick when he had to put on his good clothes. Jim was quiet, like his mother. Had to fight with John all the time. Couldn't get him up a-morning."

"Seemed like he was always working on something, though. Always busy. My sister worked for the Pershings, too. They was fine people; always had help around the house. They said John was smart in school. He was what I call ambitious—always doing a lot of tricks. Kick me on mah shins, hit me with a stick—he'd get it back on you. I never got the best of that John no time."

"I remember him just a little after he went away. He'd come to the town in summer time. They said he was awful mean. He sees the paper with this in it 'he'll know who it is. He'll remember me. I guess he ought to, the way he used to lambast me around.'"

Mrs. Gillingham for several years has worked in Kansas City, and is reputed to be one of the best cooks in the city.—Kansas City Star.

FATHER AND SON CROSS THE GREAT DIVIDE

An unusually sad instance of the poignancy of death is brought to light in the passing of Thomas P. Mullin and Thomas M. Mullin, father and son, of 33 Pleasant street, within 24 hours of each other. The senior Mr. Mullin was struck by an automobile at Church and George streets a week ago, causing a fracture of the skull which resulted in his death Saturday. Yesterday, his son passed away at his home. The younger man was but 31 years old. The family is well known and the double burden will be shared by a host of sorrowful friends. Surviving members of the family are: Mrs. Bridget Mullin, James J. of New Bedford, Lawrence H., Robert and George, Mrs. Mary Callahan, the Misses Anna, Margaret, Agnes and Celia Mullin.

MAN DESPONDENT ON ACCOUNT OF BEING DRAFTED, COMMITTS SUICIDE

Walter Dzura, 15 Hugh street, Centerville, committed suicide yesterday morning by slashing his throat. It is understood that he was despondent on account of having been drafted and was worried about the welfare of his wife and child if he should be compelled to serve in the army. The ambulance was called but upon its arrival at 7:40 the man was dead and the body was removed to the rooms of Undertakers Charles H. Molloy's Sons.

TRY THIS TONIC FOR STUBBORN ILLS OF THE STOMACH

Some forms of stomach trouble that do not yield to ordinary treatment often respond to the tonic treatment that builds up the system, strengthens the nerves that control the digestive processes and gives the stomach a supply of rich, red blood.

"My stomach was out of order," says Mr. Albert J. Snell, whose address is R. F. D. No. 63, Bemus Point, N. Y., and my appetite was so poor that I did not care for food. There was constantly a gnawing pain in my stomach. I got but little nourishment and soon was completely run-down. I couldn't sleep nor rest well, although I craved it and my eyes ached. My complexion and the whites of my eyes had a sallow, jaundice-like color. I grew so weak and shaky that I could hardly put one foot ahead of the other and my back was weak and sore. I then tried several medicines without benefit, until I took Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. A few boxes showed me that they were adapted to my trouble and they entirely relieved me. I work hard every day and have never been troubled with my stomach since."

Somany dyspeptics have been helped by this simple treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills that every sufferer from indigestion should try it. Good digestion is impossible without a supply of rich, red blood and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually build up the blood to do this work.

The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y., has issued a free book "What to Eat and How to Eat" that should be in every home. It gives just the information that you want regarding your diet. The company will mail Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, postpaid, at 50 cents per box or your own druggist can supply you. Do not pay more.

COAL BULLETIN NO. 22

Cut this out and paste it up and next winter take a look at it, and remember that in the year 1918 on the twenty-ninth day of July we told you steam coal would be short in Lowell and that you should protect yourself by placing an order with us and thereby insure the running of your plant and uninterrupted work for your employees. Better take our advice and come in and make arrangements to clear clear of trouble when the snow blows and the ice hinders traffic. We are in a position to take care of you now, but we don't know about the future, if you delay your orders too long. A word to the wise is sufficient.

We have a lot of hard coal running and pretty soon our trucks will be going full tilt for your anthracite bins. We will get the coal. Yours for power and heat next winter.

FIGHT WITH SUB U. S. CASUALTIES

Passengers on British Liner Tell of Battle Off the New Jersey Coast

Ship in Same Convoy With Ill-fated Justicia—Fired on U. S. Submarine

AN ATLANTIC PORT, July 23.—Passengers on a British liner arriving here yesterday said that last Friday their ship gave battle to a German U-boat 750 miles off the New Jersey coast and Friday night fired three shots at what is now believed to have been an American submarine. Apparently neither undersea craft was hit.

The liner was one of several which were being convoyed with the giant Justicia when that vessel was torpedoed and sunk off the north Irish coast on July 20. According to the passengers, a torpedo which hit the Justicia passed astern of their own ship, and narrowly missed another merchantman before finding its goal.

T. H. Butt of Augusta, Ga., a brother of Maj. Archibald Butt, once aide to President Taft, who lost his life on the Titanic, described the liner's three encounters with submarines.

The first, he said, came on July 19, two days after the merchantmen, conveyed by destroyers, left a British port. The booming of guns and the shrieking of whistles brought the passengers to the deck.

"The sea was smooth as we took our stations at the lifeboats," said Mr. Butt. "We crowded on all steam and zig-zagged in company with our convoying destroyers. We left the scene in a race to save ourselves. We heard during the night that the Justicia and destroyers were fighting the U-boats and later learned that her struggle to survive had failed."

Mr. Butt said that the ship met no more submarines until last Friday at noon, when 750 miles off the New Jersey coast the call to quarters was again sounded and the ship's guns began firing at an object apparently several miles away.

"This was a super-submarine," said Mr. Butt. "It made no attempt to come nearer and, after firing solid shot, which fell short at least 1000 yards, began to fire scarpnel."

The exchange of shots lasted about 45 minutes, according to Mr. Butt, who said the U-boat then submerged and was not seen again.

At the same time, another submarine engaged a British freighter in the same waters and it was thought the U-boat was sunk. "If so, the Britisher got a good one," said Mr. Butt, "for these boats are super-submarines, which depend more on destruction by gunfire than by torpedoes."

"We got our next shock last night," he said. "In a smooth sea a big submarine broke water not three miles away and at once our gunners fired three shots at the boat while our commander signalled, 'Who are you?' The shots fell close to the boat and we could see the flutter of flags, but no sign of a flag to denote the nationality of the U-boat. Finally our commander signalled to the gun crews to cease firing and we came on, leaving the submarine on the surface."

Among the passengers were Captain John H. Pratt and the crew of 37 of the American steamship George L. Eaton, which was abandoned June 22 in European waters, leaking.

The line along the greater part of the bottom of the Solons-Rheims salient has been pushed forward in some places as much as five miles.

The Germans are bringing into play their artillery in force to check the plunges of the Franco-American troops. The Americans have played a brilliant part in the advance, which included the occupation of Serpy, on the north bank of the river, and a number of small villages.

The line tonight follows the Ourcq river to Serpy and to Goussancourt, the latter place lying about six miles north of the Marne.

The Germans offered bitter resistance, but not to compare with that which began late yesterday for the retention of the higher ground farther north of the river. There they supplemented their defense with artillery fire reaching over the American front lines to the supports, the volume of fire at times attaining enormous proportions.

Unwaveringly the Americans held their ground and even advanced slightly, while the French on the sectors to the right and left resisted as steadily.

From behind the advancing lines the allied heavy guns kept up a continuous bombardment throughout the day, shelling the German positions wherever the airmen reported troop concentration.

Yesterdays List of 225 Largest Since U. S. Entered War—Week's Total, 1050

Total Casualties in Army and Navy up to Yesterday Aggregate 13,766

WASHINGTON, July 29.—Heavy fighting along the Aisne and Marne, in which American troops have participated, has begun to show in the casualty lists issued by the War department. Yesterday's list of 225 names is the longest to be given out since American units made their appearance on the battle front. The list, however, it was believed, gives casualties resulting from the recent German offensive operations rather than from the Allied counter stroke now in progress.

The total casualties in the army and marine corps overseas increased 1050 during the week, compared with 393 the previous week, and aggregates 13,766 with the inclusion of today's army list of 225 and the marine corps list of two. The week's increase also was the largest yet recorded.

The army casualties summary as officially announced follows:

Killed in action (including 291 at sea), 2009.
Died of wounds, 749.
Died of disease, 1455.
Died of accident and other causes, 570.
Wounded in action, 6640.
Missing in action, 857.
Missing to date, 11,740.
The official summary of marine corps

casualties follows:

TWO MEN ARRESTED FOR PRODUCING LIQUOR FOR SOLDIERS

John Bestren of Fall River was arrested in this city yesterday and was locked up on a charge of supplying liquor to soldiers. Walenty Szarak, who also tried his hand as a dispenser of the forbidden liquid, found himself locked up before the day was over. Both men will be taken to Camp Devens where their cases will be looked into by the federal authorities.

ROOKIES AT CAMP DEVENS CHEER WAR TALK BY THE GOVERNOR OF MAINE

CAMP DEVENS, July 29.—Fifteen thousand recruits, some of them with army hats or khaki shirts or trench shoes to show they were no longer civilians, shouted, cheered, applauded and sang in a way to split the heavens wide open when Gov. Carl E. Miliken of Maine last night addressed two big outdoor meetings which savored of Billy Sunday tabernacle rallies in their liveliness.

They even applauded Chaplain S. S. Robins at the conclusion of his prayer. But it was when Gov. Miliken, who followed the 2000 draftees from the Pine Tree State to camp, declared that "the principle of brutal autocracy cannot live in the world so long as the flag which has been carried from America to the western front still flies" that the thousands of rookies tore loose in a fashion that wouldn't be comforting to German ears.

Spirit of '76 Still Lives

They yelled again when the governor told them that they have taken their place in history by coming here to join Uncle Sam's clothes.

"America is stepping in," he said, "to give decisive force to the battle of our noble allies. America is making its immense contribution in material, its magnificent contribution in terms of men; but I want you to notice that most all the American contribution is a contribution of spirit and soul. And they said that the souls of these thousands of soldiers and men were as good as dead, drowned in a flood of gold! They didn't know that the spirit of the few men who gathered 142 years ago in a little building in Philadelphia to sign a 'scrap of paper' was still alive!"

Mrs. A. B. Hitchcock of Concord, wife of Maj. Hitchcock, sang solos, the only woman in a meeting of these thousands of recruits, and was applauded as no soloist who has faced an audience at Devens has been. Two recruits, still in "cits," furnished other features of the meetings, recruit Raymond McCormick, who had brought his cornet from his Springfield home, and recruit Walter Merritt of North Danville, N. H., a violinist.

The meetings were arranged by the Y.M.C.A. and were held in natural outdoor amphitheatres in the Depot Brigade area. As the thousands stood and sang the "Battle Hymn of the Republic," Gov. Miliken said he was thrilled as no other of the hundreds of audiences he has faced has ever thrilled him.

New Pass Regulations

Beginning this morning, all persons not in the army are going to find it difficult to do business inside the new settlement without carrying the new pass regulations issued by Col. Geo. M. Byrde, camp commander. Hereafter all salesmen, tailors, barbers, and even volunteer chaplains and Y.M.C.A. workers whose business brings them into the camp regularly must carry passes bearing their photographs.

These passes are being issued only by the camp intelligence office after investigation. The personal record of those desiring passes will be looked into.

Any civilian who desires admittance

SWELTERING IN DRILLS AT CAMP HANCOCK

AUGUSTA, Ga., July 29.—It is hot down in Georgia. Nobody is more uncomfortably aware of that fact than Private Smith and his tens of thousands of comrades who swelter through drills at Camp Hancock, near Augusta.

A big army cantonment is not a summer resort, especially in the southland. The sun is always on the job. It is not easy to get away from it. There is much dust. The men toiling at the task of learning how to kill Germans, work and play, eat and sleep in an atmosphere always more or less torrid.

Suppose you were one of these boys. Suppose all day you had been bucketed through infantry tactics or hammered through bayonet practice, and then make-believe boches that would make you want more than anything else in the world as you hiked back to your quarters and waited with hundreds more for an all-too-brief sprinkle under an inadequate shower? An ocean, a lake, a pond, of course—any body of cool water big enough to get into.

Viewing with expert eyes Camp Hancock and its perspiring thousands, the camp community service saw this; realized what a boon would be a bathing place, and because it is the business of war camp community service to provide what is good for soldiers' minds and bodies, set about to make a reality of the dream of these men.

Today Camp Hancock bathes, Camp Hancock swims, dives, and otherwise disports itself in clear, cool water. A walk of ten minutes from the center of camp and the soldier may plunge overboard with such gratification as can be imagined only by those who have dipped in lake or sea after a taxing day of work and heat.

It came about thus—one more accomplishment like many war camp community service has brought to pass in hundreds of communities adjacent to the great military camps.

to camp after 7.30 at night will have to have a special pass.

The hottest day of the summer fortunately fell on a Sunday. The small visiting crowd suffered from the heat and barracks in some parts of camp were opened to civilians.

Only in one part of camp was the week-day schedule carried on at top speed, in the personnel office at the base hospital, where Capt. Arthur H. Whitman's men worked a full day examining and registering the records of new draftees. The doctors sweltered at their tasks.

A few thousand Catholic draftees turned out for mass yesterday forenoon, in the personnel office at the base hospital, where Capt. Arthur H. Whitman's men worked a full day examining and registering the records of new draftees. The doctors sweltered at their tasks.

Jewish Welfare Building Opens

Jewish visitors attended an informal opening of the Jewish Welfare building, to be presided over by A. Rosenstein, camp representative, a sculptor of note, whose "Truckman" and "War Bride" have attracted much favorable comment. His assistant is L. Spector of Pleasantville, N. Y., and Dr. Jacob Goldstein is in charge of religious work.

This new building, costing $11,000, is one of the most attractive of the camp recreational buildings, with its library, fireplaces, stage, rest rooms and headquarters company of the Depot Brigade, which is now commanded by Capt. C. A. Watnright, Vice Capt. C. W. Kusche, who takes over the 29th company.

Vacancies in the battalion commanders of the Depot Brigade caused by transfers to the 12th division, have been filled as follows: Command 1st Battalion, Capt. W. L. Hayes; 3d Battalion, C. P. Purdy; 4th Battalion, Capt. H. A. Burnes; 6th Battalion, Capt. G. W. Hoban; 9th Battalion, Capt. J. J. McGuire; 10th Battalion, H. F. Moylton; 11th Battalion, Capt. A. H. Onthank.

Second Lieut. G. B. Currier becomes commander of the big Depot Brigade exchange business, Vice Capt. E. A. Austin transferred.

Maj. A. B. Hitchcock, organizing the 73d Infantry, has made the following assignments: Headquarters company, Capt. Bernard A. Merriam; Machine Gun company, Capt. John Paulding Brown; A company, Capt. D. P. Pollock; B company, Capt. DeForest Anthony; C company, Capt. Samuel H. Vorrall; D company, Capt. Frederick Halloway; E company, Capt. Edwin Hansen; F company, Capt. Roger Weeks; G company, Capt. R. T. Hatch; H company, Capt. Franklin H. Prescott; I company, Capt. Norman E. Lovell; K company, Capt. Alan G. Warner; L company, Capt. Charles O. Ashton; M company, Capt. Edward A. Austin.

First Lieut. Herbert E. Jacques of Somerville becomes adjutant and 1st Lieut. William E. Sheed personnel officer.

guded its worries as to mosquitoes by cleaning out all the water lilies and sedge, at a cost of several thousand dollars. The United States bureau of fisheries has been asked to take with top-minnows; these are to be used on mosquito larvae remaining. Military police keep order. A sanitary squad safeguards the health of bathers.

So Private Smith—the endless procession of him that will tread the sun-baked ways of Camp Hancock before this war is done—will be a better and a lot more comfortable soldier because of war camp community service.

PRIV. JOSEPH SULLIVAN WOUNDED IN FRANCE

Another Lowell boy has been severely wounded in France. Private Joseph Sullivan, headquarters company, 101st regiment, in France, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Sullivan of 223 Cross street, is the latest soldier from this city to figure in the casualty list. His parents have received a telegram telling of his being wounded.

Private Sullivan enlisted in May, 1917, at the outbreak of the war, and was first stationed at Keene, N. H. Later he went to camp at Framingham, where he was a member of the old Sixth regiment. He was later transferred to the old Ninth regiment and went to Camp Devens, whence he sailed to France early in September.

The wounded man is 20 years old. A brother, Daniel, left for Camp Devens last Wednesday to enter the national army.

JACK DEMPSEY BEATS FULTON IN FIRST

HARRISON PARK, N. J., July 29.—Jack Dempsey, who claims California as his residential State, won a surprisingly quick victory over Fred Fulton, the Rochester, Minn., heavyweight, in 23 seconds, at the Harrison baseball park here Saturday evening.

Dempsey Makes Good

Some of Dempsey's friends who heard him say before he entered the ring that he "would knock out the big Rochester man in short order," thought Dempsey was over confident, but he made good almost as soon as the two men entered the ring.

Fulton towered over his opponent when Referee John P. Eckhardt of Atlantic City was giving them final instructions. Fulton's face wore a cynical grin, while Dempsey scowled a bit, but looked the more confident of the pair.

The moment the bell called the men from their corners, Dempsey rushed at Fulton and took the big fellow by surprise, landing a hard right swing under the heart and hooking his left to the stomach. These blows made Fulton wince, and the bigger man was unable to defend himself with Dempsey at such close quarters. Fulton's last arms swung helplessly over Dempsey's head, but Dempsey sent in two short arm body blows.

Then Jack stepped back about a foot and hooked his left to the Rochester giant's head, and swung his right to the head, and Fulton's jaw. The big man tottered and fell sideways to the floor of the ring, his head resting on his right arm, which pinned down the lower rope of the three which encircled the ring.

There was scarcely a sound from the big crowd of spectators when the referee began counting the seconds over the prostrate man. Fulton tried ineffectually to raise his head and his seconds carried their man to his corner.

Dempsey in the meanwhile was easily the most composed man in the ring or the arena. He walked over to Fulton's corner and took the big fellow by the hand, and then he turned to talk contently and seemingly untroubled to realize what had happened in such a brief space of time.

The actual time that the one-sided fight lasted was 23 seconds, and Dempsey won the right to the world's heavyweight title in one case while relinquishes claim to it in exactly 23 seconds.

When Announcer Humphries was about to introduce the men to the spectators, Dempsey, who was born at Manassa, Colo., and became known to pugilism while living in Salt Lake City, requested the announcer to say that he claimed California as his native State.

Dempsey says he is going west next week to resume his trade at shipbuilding and will not fight in the ring again until the war is ended.

Moving pictures of the contest were taken, and they will be presented to the government for the amusement of the United States soldiers and sailors at home and abroad.

BRITT MAKES HIT

Frankie Britt who defeated Phinney Boyle here last week, made a great hit with the local fans, and all would welcome another chance to look him over. Many of the members of the C.A.A., who saw the Britt-Boyle bout, were surprised several months ago over that the New Bedford whaler has greatly improved, and is now going better than ever before. Boyle, however, is still confident that he will be able to come back, and is anxious for another crack at the title holder.

Johnny Boyle and Tony Vathan have been matched for a ten round bout, and this bout should be well worth seeing. Both are past masters at the game, having appeared in numerous battles, and when they clash the fans ought to see some action.

George Brooks, nephew of Jimmy Gardner, who stopped Young O'Dowd the other night in one round, is bound to be heard from if he follows the game.

He's a "dead ringer" for his famous uncle, and his work is a treat to look upon. The left, which made Young Gardner feared throughout the country, is George's best asset. His footwork and general all round boxing, show that he has the "makings" of a top notcher if properly handled.

SKATING RACE AT WILLOW DALE

Albert Nobes, champion roller skater of the east, and Louis Patnaude, who claims the championship of Montreal, but who is now working at the U. S. Cartridge shop, will meet in a five mile race for a side bet at the Willow Dale rink on Saturday night. Both men are well trained and such is the grade of the rink that the race is in great condition for a fast race. Admission will be free, but there will be a charge for skates.

PONIES DEFEAT BOOTT MILLS

The Ponies defeated the Boott Mills team, 5 to 7, Saturday afternoon at spaulding park in a fast and interesting game, featured by good plays on both sides. Brennan of the Ponies was easily the star of the game, aided by one Bookley. J. Riley pitched a nice game for the Ponies, it being his

BIG MUNITION STRIKE IN ENGLAND ENDS

COVENTRY, England, July 28.—At a mass meeting today, the strikers in the munition plants decided to resume work immediately.

BIRMINGHAM, England, July 28.—Acting on a resolution passed by their colleagues yesterday, the strikers in munition works here returned to work today. Although their hostility to the embargo on skilled labor is unabated, the promise of an inquiry into the situation has reconciled the strikers to the inevitable. Some of them had a hostile reception from the men and women who had remained at work.

It is expected the action taken by the workers in Coventry and Birmingham will have a soothing effect in other districts where the men have been threatening to lay down their tools.

U. S. CRUISER SAN DIEGO

The first United States warship to be sunk since the nation entered the war was the armored cruiser San Diego, formerly the California but renamed in honor of the Panama-California Exposition at San Diego in 1915. She was one of the first war vessels to be sent to Mexican waters at the time of the imbroglio with that nation. Most of her peace service has been in Pacific waters, where she was flagship of the Pacific fleet. In January, 1915, she met with a disaster when tubes in her boilers blew out during a steaming trial, causing the death of nine members of her crew.

Berlin speaks of "new positions," but does not indicate where they are. The German command may elect to make a stand on strongly prepared positions south of the Vesle. Observers think the Vesle will mark the retirement north of the river, but the river is shallow and runs northwest. The Aisne, however, runs east and west between Soissons and Rheims and with the heights of the Chemin-des-Dames behind it would offer just as strong a defensive position as it did immediately after the first battle of the Marne.

In its official statement, Berlin makes no admission of allied advances either Saturday or Sunday. Reporting on Sunday's operations, it says that the day was quiet except for fighting on the Oureq.

French Capture 1500
There has been heavy local fighting in the height region between Rheims and Soissons, east of the Marne battlefield, but Gen. Gouraud has held to his recent gains and smashed German attacks. Prisoners captured here by the French are reported unofficially to total 1500.

Tremblay—Levesseur.
A pretty marriage took place this morning at St. Joseph's church, when Mr. Joseph Mederic Tremblay and Miss Marie Emilia Rosalda Levesseur, two well known young people of this city, were united in the bonds of matrimony. The ceremony was performed at a nuptial mass celebrated at 7 o'clock by Rev. Armand Baron, O.M.I. During the mass, appropriate hymns were sung by the Notre Dame de Lourdes' sodality choir of which the bride was a member. The couple was attended by their respective fathers, Messrs. Mederic Tremblay and Joseph Levesseur. At the close of the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bridegroom's parents, 32 Common street and later the couple left on a honeymoon trip.

Pearson—Bengston.
Mr. Sven Joel Pearson and Miss Hilda Bengston were married Saturday at the home of the bridegroom's brother, in Stevens street, the officiating clergyman being Rev. P. E. Nordgren, pastor of the Swedish Lutheran church. The bridesmaid was Miss Hilda Johnson, while the best man was Mr. George McFadyen. The couple will make their home in Viola street.

DRIVE STARTED AGAINST RENT PROFITEERING

(By Newspaper Enterprise Ass'n)
CLEVELAND, July.—The fight is on against rent profiteering in this city, and Miss Pauline Balzer, secretary of the special committee investigating the rent situation, is going to be a big factor in ousting the profiteering landlord.

A meeting of tenants will be called soon to put before the committee their complaints and later the landlords will be called to give their side of the story and if they can show cause for any unreasonable rent increase.

Some of Miss Balzer's duties are: Compilation of a card index of tenants whose rents have been increased in the last three years.

Compilation of a roster of members of the proposed Tenants' League of Cleveland.

It will be her duty to gather all information to establish if the landlord is justified in an increase in rent. Miss Balzer has been a stenographer in the city clerk's office for 14 years.

To Divide City
Committee members propose to divide the city into wards with an enrollment officer in charge of each to obtain members. Dwellings have been divided into two classes, the first supplying heat and the other with no heat. This will help in figuring the percentage of cost of maintenance.

Landlords who built their houses during the pre-war period will not be allowed to charge as high rent as the house built since that time.

Work in Appleton Street to Be Completed Within Week, Says Mr. Morse

Pawtucket Bridge Roadway in Bad Shape—More Mov-ies on South Common

Appleton street, which has been more or less a cause of complaint for several years because of the condition of the roadway, will be in perfect condition for travel within a week, according to Commissioner Charles J. Morse of the street department. The latest hold-up of the work was the delay of the Bay State Street Railway Co., in paving between the car tracks, but now the Bay State men have started on the work and expect to finish in four or five days.

They have had to put up wooden horses along the tracks to keep traffic off the portion being paved and other debris has kept the street in a more-or-less state of confusion.

FURIOUS FIGHT

Teutons Reinforced by Two Crack Bavarian Divisions and Americans Engaged

Battle North of River Ourcq—Americans Hold Huns From Recrossing River

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY ON THE AISNE-MARNE FRONT, July 29. (By the Associated Press.)—Reinforced by two crack divisions of Bavarian guards, the Teutons today settled down to the hardest resistance they have yet displayed against the American forces north of the River Ourcq.

Although heavily hammered, the Americans replied in like manner and the fighting shifted back and forth through Sergy, three miles south of Fere-en-Tardenois. Up to mid-day the Germans had been unable to force a re-crossing of the Ourcq.

French and American troops were slashing vigorously at the stiffening German rear, early today, with some prospect that before night the advance line would be close to the river Aisne which is now only a few kilometers away.

The German base at Fere-en-Tardenois has been occupied.

From Rheims, the line now extends almost straight southwest to Oulchy-le-Vervain. The forest of Rils is now behind the allies and they are holding Champvoisy, to the northeast of the forest. In this region the Germans have the higher ground and have some advantage in the artillery duel.

Pershing Announces Crossing of River by Americans—Force Enemy Back

Americans Capture Seringes-et-Nes, Sergy and Roncheres

WASHINGTON, July 29.—The crossing of the Ourcq by the American forces in their pursuit of the enemy north of the Marne, was reported in General Pershing's communique for yesterday, received at the war department.

Capture by the Americans of the towns of Seringes-et-Nes, Sergy and Roncheres, beyond the Ourcq, also is announced.

The statement follows: "Headquarters American Expeditionary Forces, July 28, 1918.

"Section A—North of the Marne, our troops continue the pursuit of the enemy. In spite of his determined efforts to delay their progress by rear guard actions, they have crossed the Ourcq and have taken the towns of Seringes-et-Nes, Sergy and Roncheres.

"Section B—There is nothing to report in this sector."

ANOTHER DEATH IN RACE RIOTS

PHILADELPHIA, July 29.—A negro was shot and killed today in South Philadelphia, where a succession of race riots has occurred since Saturday. This makes three deaths as a result of the disorders, two men, one of them a policeman, having been shot dead yesterday. More than three score persons have been injured. The negro killed today had been arrested by two policemen and tried to escape by slashing them with a razor.

As he was being taken into a police station, someone in the crowd fired a shot which struck him in the back. The trouble, according to the police, started over race feeling engendered when the negroes began moving into the residential section populated exclusively by whites. Three hundred policemen, aided by 60 marines from the navy yard, are on duty in the disturbed section.

Whole Fourth Division of Prussian Guards Hurled Back by Americans

LONDON, July 29.—The Americans met Germany's finest regiments in battle south of Sergy, last night, where the enemy threw in the whole fourth division of Prussian guards in a desperate counter attack. Advances reaching London this afternoon show that the Americans stood like a stone wall, brought the Germans to a clean stop and inflicted the heaviest losses upon them.

ALLIES PURSUE RETREATING HUNS ALONG WHOLE LINE

Germans Suffer Severe Defeat North of Marne—Fere-en-Tardenois, Great German Base, Falls and Ville-en-Tardenois Is Within Grasp of Advancing Allies—Huns and Americans in Desperate Battle

(By The Associated Press)

North of the Marne, the tide of German invasion is ebbing fast. The fact that a general retreat in this region is going on is not questioned and the only question of moment remaining to be cleared up is the location of the position at which the enemy will turn at bay.

Since Saturday morning, there have been important changes in the battle line between Soissons and Rheims. Today it runs almost directly east from Oulchy-le-Chateau to Fere-en-Tardenois, then crosses the Ourcq and continues eastward until it reaches the Dormans-Rheims road northwest of Rheims mountain.

HUNS BURN VILLAGES AS THEY FLEE

Military experts thought that the Germans might stand on the line of the Ourcq river, from which their heavy cannon could dominate the Paris-Chalons railroad along the Marne. This idea is now proved erroneous. It appears that there is no defensive position south of the Vesle river to which the Germans can retire and organize their resistance to allied pressure. The only other defensive position seemingly possible is the one that follows the Aisne and Vesle from Soissons to Fismes and from that point follows the course of the Aisne river toward Rheims. Burning villages along the Aisne and the Vesle from Soissons to Bazoches are reported and tend to confirm the impression that the Germans do not contemplate organized resistance south of that line.

Germans Escape From Trap There is every indication that the German high command has succeeded in extricating its forces from the trap sprung by General Foch. The resistance of the Germans for a week after the beginning of the allied counter offensive probably gave them time to withdraw their heavier guns and a large proportion of their supplies from the salient. This resistance was strong along the line south of Soissons as far as Oulchy-le-Ville and west and southwest of Rheims which were the vital sectors of the battle line.

The advance of the allies east of Oulchy-le-Chateau must soon compel the enemy to evacuate the line from the Ourcq river toward Soissons for a considerable distance. Near Rheims, however, the Germans seem to hold positions that provide a pivot for their retreat toward the Vesle river.

In this region the allies this morning were getting close to the Ardre river which forms a protection to the right flank of the enemy positions near Rheims.

Severe Hun Defeat North of Marne

As the situation now stands, the Germans must be considered to have suffered a severe defeat north of the Marne, but it is not a Sedan.

Victory for Australians

While they have been busy getting their forces back out of the bag between Soissons and Rheims, forces farther north have been attacked by the British, once more Australian troops attacking on each side of the Bray-Corbis road, east of Amiens and north of the Somme river. Two lines of German trenches over a two-mile front and 100 prisoners were taken.

This operation is just to the north of Hamel and Villers-Bretonneux, where the Australians and Americans early in July won a local victory. Farther south is the line over which the French have more recently advanced to dominating positions along the Aisne river.

Half of Pocket Cleared

More than half the pocket between the Marne and Vesle rivers has been cleared of Germans, and the allies are driving the enemy still farther north.

Important gains are being made by French and Americans on the south and French and British on the east. The German retreat, which is covered by heavy rear guard actions, has been well conducted. Pressure on the western and eastern sides, south of Soissons, and southwest of Rheims, respectively, has been withstood and the mouth of the pocket is still large enough to enable the greater part of the enemy force to reach the Vesle.

Allies Take Fere-en-Tardenois

Fere-en-Tardenois, the great German base northeast of Chateau Thierry, has fallen and Ville-en-Tardenois, west of Fere, is within the grasp of the advancing allies. Almost all of the Dormans-Rheims road again is in allied hands and the Germans apparently are preparing to fall back to the Vesle, if not to the Aisne.

Germans Offer Still Resistance

No great captures of prisoners have been reported. The Germans are using artillery and machine-guns to stay the allies. The French and the Americans who have advanced rapidly, press northward, the German resistance becoming stiffer. The enemy is also making great use of his artillery on the heights north of Soissons and is

A GREAT VICTORY

French Commander's Tribute to Military Skill and Audacity of Bay State Boys

Fought Night and Day With Zeal That Had to Be Restrained at Times

WASHINGTON, July 29.—High tribute to the military skill and "magnificent audacity" of an American division, probably the 26th (New England) as it is described as being composed largely of Massachusetts troops, is paid in an official report from the commander of the French army to which the Americans are attached. An abstract of the report received here today shows that from July 18 to 25 in the region north of Chateau-Thierry this division had advanced 7.7 kilometres, fighting day and night with a zeal that had to be restrained at times.

On July 20, the report says, "In order to free Monthiers and the Petrel wood, still strongly occupied by the Germans, severe combats were delivered by the French troops on the left. In order to relieve them the Americans on the evening of the 20th delivered a flanking movement which fully succeeded. With magnificent audacity they rushed forward with a single bound up the level of Etrepilly, the Bonatille farm and Laval-Marde.

"It was a most sudden attack which disclosed all the American fearlessness. In spite of the severe barrage and machine gun emplacements in which the enemy were sheltering, two kilometres in depth were gained. They also captured three cannon, a large type mine wrecker and machine guns. Besides, 200 prisoners fell into the hands of the Americans.

"I could not have done better under the circumstances with the best troops," declared General De Gaulle, on hearing of the fine success of our allies.

"The Germans then found themselves in such a precarious position at Monthiers that they had to begin to retreat."

Telling of the work of the American division on July 22, when it took the woods north of Epiels, the report says: "The Germans furiously opposed this attempt and counter attacked with great energy, but they learned to their cost the meaning of American tenacity. Impeded the first time in their maneuver, the Americans took the outskirts of Epiels, the 24th, went straight into it and seized a whole company of German prisoners and continued their advance."

Allies Push On Beyond Fere-en-Tardenois in Spite of Counter Attacks

German Base Changed Hands Four Times, Finally Remaining to Allies

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY IN FRANCE, July 29.—(Nood) (By the Associated Press.) The allies pushed on beyond Fere-en-Tardenois this morning and maintained their positions everywhere in the face of strong German counter attacks. The village of Sergy, southeast of Fere-en-Tardenois, changed hands four times, finally remaining in possession of the allies.

A violent artillery duel was on this morning north of the Ourcq as far as Soissons. In the sector south of the Ourcq the guns also were busy.

BADLY BEATEN

Huns Lost All Ground Gained Since July 15 and Half of That Gained on May 17

Great Paris-Chateau Thierry-Chalons Railroad Restored to Allied Use

LONDON, July 29 (via Ottawa).—What seems the most valuable strategic result to the allies of the German retreat, is the restoration to allied use of the great Paris-Chateau-Thierry-Chalons railway, by means of which the Champagne front is vitalized and which will be an important factor in future military developments.

The action may now slow down and even become stabilized for a time between Soissons and Rheims, where the Germans are apparently concentrating great forces, but the fact remains that the enemy is badly beaten. He not only does not hold a single inch of ground gained since July 15, but within a fortnight has been forced to abandon nearly half the advantages gained by his offensive of May 27.

The question now is, will the enemy settle down to resistance on the plateau south of the Vesle or continue his retirement to the heights between the Vesle and the Aisne? The answer will depend on the extent of his losses and the number of his reserves, and indications hitherto are that his losses have not been excessive. It is regarded as certain that at least the salient will be flattened to a straight line from Soissons to Rheims which alone would shorten the allies' line by 30 miles and lessen the demands on the allied reserves.

Boston's Most Noted Tourist Guide, Offers a Statement for Publication

Mr. Slater of 163 Sylvan street, Maplewood, Mass., who has been a guide to multiplied thousands of visitors and tourists, and who perhaps is known personally to more Bostonians than any man in metropolitan Boston, makes this statement for the benefit of Lowell people:

"I have been a sufferer of rheumatism for years. The nature of my business requires me to stand on the street for hours and days. I had read and heard many people telling of the marvelous results they had received from the use of Vitalitas, and I finally decided to give it a trial, and I am thankful that I did, for now I am free from rheumatism. I can go about my business; I sleep better and work better. I believe Vitalitas is the greatest remedy in the world for rheumatism."

Vitalitas is in a class by itself, a natural remedy, free from "dope" or alcohol and should be in every home.

Thin, delicate people; people who are nervous; people who are run down and those that are troubled with rheumatism, indigestion, kidney or liver ill, should start this great treatment at once. Dows Drug Store, Merrimack square.—Adv.

NERVOUS PROSTRATION

May be Overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—This Letter Proves It.

West Philadelphia, Pa.—"During the thirty years I have been married, I have been in bad health and had several attacks of nervous prostration until it seemed as if the organs in my whole body were worn out. I was finally persuaded to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it made a well woman of me. I can now do all my housework and advise all ailing women to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I will guarantee they will derive great benefit from it."—Mrs. FRANK FITZGERALD, 28 N. 41st Street, West Philadelphia, Pa.

There are thousands of women everywhere in Mrs. Fitzgerald's condition, suffering from nervousness, backache, headaches, and other symptoms of a functional derangement. It was a grateful spirit for health restored which led her to write this letter so that other women may benefit from her experience and find health as she has done.

The letters constantly being published from women in every section of this country prove beyond question the merit of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

with the killing of ten people by a bomb during a preparedness parade in San Francisco two years ago. In the course of the meeting resolutions urging the president of the United States to use the full power of his office to have the case transferred from the courts of California to the federal court, were adopted, and it was also voted to send a telegram to the convicted man to the effect that Lowell organized labor was with him heart and soul in his fight for a fair trial.

The meeting had been scheduled for 4.15 o'clock but on the chairmen of the afternoon did not open the meeting until the game was over. In the early part of the afternoon a pleasing concert was given by the Lowell Military band.

The meeting was presided over by President John J. Carroll of the Machinists' union, who after explaining the purpose of the gathering, introduced as the first speaker, Organizer William J. Larkin, also of the machinists' union. In the course of his remarks Mr. Larkin said that organized labor all over the country feels that it has been unfairly dealt with in the Mooney case. He spoke of the case in a general way. He said it wasn't Mooney so much as it was organized labor which had been on trial and which had not been given a square deal.

The next speaker was John D. Barry, a former editorial writer for the San Francisco Bulletin, who spoke of the facts concerning the case. Speaking about the bomb that killed 10 people and wounded 40, Mr. Barry said it could not have been thrown by a labor man for a labor man would not have sought to kill his own. He said that clues to the possibility of a German or Mexican dropping the bomb had been suggested to the authorities, but all clues were dropped and the whole terrible thing was planned on organized labor.

Mr. Barry said there had been differences between labor and capital in California for a number of years and a million dollars had been raised ostensibly to protect San Francisco, but in reality it was raised to give labor a death blow, and the Mooney case is a sample of the way labor is to be disgraced. In concluding the speaker said labor is not asking that Mooney be given another trial because he is a labor man, for it doesn't ask anything for Mooney that would not be asked for any other American citizen. "We ask that he be given a fair and square trial because he is an American, the sort of a trial any one of us would seek."

Ella Reeve Bloor, who is candidate for lieutenant governor of New York on the labor party's ticket said Mooney's message to the workers everywhere was "Stick together, and if you do you'll get political and economic power," and it was for delivering such messages she said, that some of the "masters" of San Francisco had sought to get him. In the course of her remarks the speaker urged the women workers to stand by the men in their demands for better working and living conditions, "for if that is done," she continued, the workers can get what they want."

Stanley Morris of New York made an appeal for funds to assist in the giving of a fair trial to Mooney and later a very substantial sum was collected in the gathering. At the close of the meeting the following resolutions were adopted:

Resolved, at a meeting of 10,000 workers assembled on the South common, Lowell, to urge the president of the United States to use the full power of his office to have the case of Thomas J. Mooney transferred from the courts of California to the federal court.

The following telegram to be sent to Mooney was then read, and it was cheered: Thomas J. Mooney, County Jail, San Francisco, Cal.

Ten thousand organized workers of Lowell want to say they are with you heart and soul in your fight for a fair trial.

LIGHTLESS NIGHT ORDERS AMENDED

Owing to the fact that Lowell stores are in the custom of keeping open on Monday evenings, the recent lightless night regulations which went into effect here last Wednesday have been amended to accommodate the merchants.

At the request of retail merchants here the prohibition against the use of lights for illumination or display in shop windows or illuminated signs in the windows have been transferred from Monday to Friday nights.

This does not affect the prohibition against the use of light for illumination or displaying advertisements, announcements or signs or for the general illumination of buildings.

This change has been made in Lowell with the approval of the state fuel administrator and goes into effect this evening.

The trouble started over the killing of a white man by a negro shortly after midnight and the wounding of two others. It continued intermittently from 9 o'clock in the morning until 7 o'clock last night, and with the fighting going on in half a dozen parts of the district the police found it hard to cope with the situation. At one point 200 marines aided in quelling the disturbance. Hundreds of shots were fired and there were but few houses in the district whose windows had not been shattered by bullets.

In addition to the public, more than 100 members of the home guard patrolled the streets last night.

Campaign Against Bootleggers and Vice at Salisbury Beach

SALISBURY BEACH, July 29.—Federal and local authorities have joined hands in a campaign to drive out bootleggers and women of objectionable character, who have come here in large numbers since a campaign against vice was inaugurated in Boston, several weeks ago. Thousands of service men visit in this vicinity every week and the authorities are anxious to afford them every protection possible. Three alleged bootleggers arrested here yesterday, upon orders from the United States marshal's office in Boston, were taken to that city today for arraignment.

PARENTS DROWN TRYING TO SAVE SON

ESSEX, July 29.—While attempting to rescue their son, Leo, aged 7, who had fallen overboard, Mr. and Mrs. James L. Barry of 30 Eden street, Salem, were drowned in Chabacco lake yesterday afternoon.

All three went to Centennial Grove together and hired a boat. After rowing about the greater part of the afternoon Leo fell into the water, and his mother also fell overboard, and, endeavoring to grasp the youngster, the father dived over in an effort to save his wife, and it is believed that they grappled with the result that they both went down.

The boy was saved by a man in another boat. The body of Mr. Barry was recovered about an hour and a half later, but the body of his wife was not found up to late last night. Mr. Barry was a Salem letter carrier and was president of the Salem Letter Carriers' association. He was also a member of the Fr. Mathew Temperance society and the Penny Aid society of Salem. He is survived by four brothers and five sisters. Mrs. Barry was formerly Mary E. Sullivan of Danvers.

JAPAN PROBLEMS

Inter-marriage, Immigration, Anti Alien Laws are War Pitfalls

Delicate United States-Japan Problems Freely Discussed by Sun Correspondent

(Copyright, 1918, Newspaper Enterprise Association)

TOKYO, July.—On a summer evening in the middle of the last century a boy of 13 came into the house from the Indigo vats on his father's farm near Chiharajima, a village 45 miles from Tokyo, then called Yedo.

He cleansed his body in a steaming hot bath. He scoured at his hands, roughened by work in the fields and then stained with the indigo which was the chief support of this simple peasant farmer's family.

He ate some rice and fish, and drank his tea. He took his daily lesson in the Chinese classics from a scholar who lived nearby. Then, while this learned man sat chatting with his father, the boy shirked his lesson to read the most interesting book he had ever got hold of—a rather crude story of the Opium War.

The book told of Britain's armed defeat of a Chinese governor's rash attempt to stop the importation of opium, and of the British seizure of Hong Kong.

While the boy, with his heart inflamed, was picturing himself the hero in an imaginary valiant defense of his Japan against such treatment as the book said China suffered from England there was a commotion at the door. A messenger burst in. He told of the arrival of the Black Ships in Yedo bay.

In those delicious birthpangs of modern Japan in the Perry era was born also the manhood of that boy, Baron Eiichi Shibusawa, the Grand Old Man of Japan, who at 78 is still the empire's leading citizen, who has no counterpart in any other nation, and whose place will never be filled.

In the span of his life he has seen the entire development of the New Japan. He has caused most of that development. He has started almost every important enterprise, commercial or civic. He is the father of banks and railroads, of stores and factories, mines and steamship lines. He has been director in more than 60 of the leading projects at one time.

His superior as a public private citizen does not exist in the world today. And I would not know where to match him.

Awakened by Perry's arrival just at a time when the east was learning how ruthless the west could be, and nurtured thus in enmity and in apprehension of similar exploitation of his own country, he has nevertheless given his life to reconciling and amalgamating east and west.

He is the father of civilization, as well as of a commercial empire. He has tried to transmute Japan's old bushido into the business ethics of a new day. To this task of bringing faulty modern commercial morality up to the samurai standards of old Japan he has devoted the last years of his life.

He has helped make hundreds of millionaires. And he calls himself a poor man. Though wealthy, it is true he is comparatively poor in dollars and cents beside some who owe their fortunes to him. He has never labored primarily for his own purse.

But I think he is in a higher sense one of the richest men who walks the earth. America would be proud to call him her own citizen.

I have eaten with him in his home, where Grant sat and where many great Americans who have visited Japan have learned to honor this living embodiment, in one man, of all that is best in Japan. There I saw Baron Shibusawa and Capt. Hardy, sole Perry survivor, talk over with shining eyes the old days when they were boys, about the modern Japan a baby. I saw tears in the eyes of both, because of their memories and their hopes.

I have had two other long talks with Baron Shibusawa. At our third meeting he answered uninterruptedly for three hours, the most searching questions I could formulate about Japan and America—questions that dodged no issue, however delicate, however vital.

And I can say with certainty that if Baron Eiichi Shibusawa, Japan's Grand Old Man, and any American his equal could be appointed a committee of two to direct all mutual affairs and relations of the two countries, Japan and America would have a glorious common destiny, and would be of such benefit to each other as would rejoice Commodore Perry's soul.

The baron paused in his talk, and our quick, eager, leap-frogging conversation halted a minute while his servant again put down before us the inevitable cups of tea which happily and appropriately interrupt each hour of so every Japanese conference, business or private. Baron Shibusawa leaned back in his chair. The chair, all chairs, sofas, the tables were sheathed in white, for the hot weather was at hand. The room was large, the ceiling high, the furniture simple, the carpet, walls and hangings tasteful. The rich wood about the fireplace was beautifully carved. I might have been sitting in the reception room of a house on Commonwealth avenue, Boston, or Euclid avenue, Cleveland, draped in cretano for the summer—save for the cups of tea in their distinctive Japanese elongated saucers. It was in the baron's offices, a Tokyo mansion down-town, five miles from his residence.

Although the baron is a short man—a head shorter than I, who am also a rather brief stature for America—he was impressive as he sat there, at ease and with the composure of final utter simplicity. The upper part of his body and his head gave the impression of force and magnitude, without being ponderous. Seventy-eight? He looked hardly sixty.

There was just a trace of gray about his thick black hair. His cheeks were firm and healthy, his mouth and chin strong, his eyes clear. These older men of Japan grow old moderately, and seem to me to bear their years better than we of "the States."

"Should America, Baron Shibusawa," I resumed, as the door closed silently upon the serving man and we lifted our tea cups—"should America now permit unrestricted immigration of Japanese, and at once extend citizenship to the Japanese already within her borders?"

It was the sorest point, the touchiest point in American-Japanese relations. Baron Shibusawa's face showed no emotion. He leaned forward slowly, and spoke calmly and with his usual simple dignity.

"That is for America to decide," he said through an interpreter. "Japan does not insist upon an immediate relaxation of immigration restrictions. It is true, Japan would like to see them removed as soon as practicable. It cannot be denied that refusal of American citizenship to Japanese immigration is a serious discrimination. Japan does not insist upon naturalization. But wise Japanese believe it will be to the advantage of the United States to remove this offensive barrier of her own accord. The progress of events will take care of these questions. When the American-born sons of Japanese immigrant fathers have attained the age of 21, and when these young men have shown their immense capacity and loyalty as genuine Americans, the question of citizenship will take care of itself."

"There have been these and other sources of friction," I said. "Do you think they have ever made war like, or ever will do so in the future?"

"There have been times," Baron Shibusawa answered, "when it seemed as if peaceful relations were endangered. At the time of California's anti-Japanese legislation I was acutely afraid. But now, despite German attempts to foment American-Japanese distrust, the two nations are closer than at any time since the Russian war, and their former complete understanding and co-operation is being revived."

"Baron, do you believe in inter-marriage between the two nations?" I asked point blank. Baron Shibusawa did not hesitate.

"That question must be approached with great circumspection," he answered. "The present task is to obliterate misunderstandings and co-operate for mutual good. Inter-marriage cannot be either encouraged or discouraged. It is not governmental. Nature must, and will, take her course, whatever that course may be."

In this way, throughout our several interviews, we covered all phases of Japanese-American relations, big and little, simple and "ticklish." Baron Shibusawa's views, thus gained, are these:

There is almost as large a percentage of self-made men in Japan as in America. Opportunity is almost as great. In this respect, and in many others, Japan is the America of the Orient.

America, save for sudden distrust and consequent discrimination immediately following the Russian war, has well fulfilled her obligation of "big brother" to Japan, and now seems to be taking up again this close relationship.

Japan's population pressure is not a serious problem, and can be relieved without any immigration necessities or attendant difficulties in the United States.

Japan does not want the Philippines. She is satisfied with their present status.

Immigration, naturalization, social amalgamation through intermarriage and these and all other like questions evolution will settle in nature's way and time.

FIGHT TO END

America to Continue Battle, Even if Other Allies Quit, Says T. P. O'Connor

Nationalist Leader's Impressions of America's Preparations for War

NEW YORK, July 29.—Impressions of T. P. O'Connor, M.P., one of the Irish nationalist leaders, of America's preparation for and participation in the world war, were written for the Associated Press just before his departure for England and for publication at the time of his arrival.

Mr. O'Connor was in this country for more than a year as a commissioner of the Irish parliamentary party and he soon joined to such labors very effective campaigns to create allied sentiment among the Irish, particularly one directed by the National Security League.

He came into contact with most of the government officials, including President Wilson, and saw the transformation of the nation from seeming lack of realization of what the war meant to "the nation that feels most passionately, most unitedly and most ruthlessly" of all the allies. He reached this conclusion:

"If any one or all of the European nations should in a war weariness show any sign of accepting an inconclusive peace, America would keep on, even if she had to stand alone. Wherever else the Germans may look for a spirit of compromise they cannot look for it, even an approach to it, from the people of the United States."

Mr. O'Connor's characterization of President Wilson is one of the most intimate ever given by foreign writers or statesmen. The picturesque Irish leader votes the president as dominantly Celt and sees a contradiction between the president of the photograph and the president of the living flesh and blood, and he prefers the latter.

After telling of his arrival in New York in June, 1917, Mr. O'Connor writes as follows:

First Impressions Disappointing
"I must own my first impressions were not encouraging from any point of view. Within a few hours I had every evidence on the one hand that the anti-English sentiment had not yet spent itself and still confused the issues in the minds of some of my race; on the other hand, the sight of this great rich city, rushing as I thought, to every seaside resort in the vacation spirit of the summer, was in marked contrast to the somber attitude and atmosphere of the city I had left after three years of war. Further, I found in private conversation, a startling evidence of a division of mind and opinion as to America's intervention in the war which was expressed with an openness which surprised and even pained me."

"I speak of this first impression frankly now, because I am able immediately to add that I saw the transformation of feeling gradually grow from one end of America to the other, until now I feel convinced that of all

The Lansing-Ishii agreement is the right basis of Japanese-American policy in China. Japan does not seek political domination, and will give commercial equality.

These are a few of the views, of most interest to Americans of a man who as a boy left his father's farm and went to Tokyo, or Yedo, as an opponent of foreign intrusion. He soon entered government service. Later he became more active in business than in political life. He founded Japan's first business school, now the Tokyo High Commercial school. He originated the Tokyo chamber of commerce, and was its president for 25 years.

He established the Osaka and Miya spinning companies. He brought about Japan's two largest steamship companies—the Nippon Yusen Kaisha and the Toyo Kisen Kaisha. He created Japan's first important railways. He founded the Tokyo clearing house, and other like organizations. He started Japan's banks and railways in Korea, and founded industrial companies there.

He has brought into being gas and electric plants, shipbuilding and cotton industries, mining, manufacturing and agricultural enterprises. He is the father of Japan's largest philanthropies.

He has visited the United States three times. And I have presented him this early in a series of articles designed to interpret 20th century Japan to Americans because, though one of the last of an heroic generation, he still stands for the best in new Japan as well as in old Japan.

And—also to show, with Baron Shibusawa as an illustration, that Japan has many great men, of all ages, in all the lines of the world's work.

BURTON KNISELY.

nations engaged in this war the one that feels most unitedly, most manfully, and most ruthlessly is America."

Mr. O'Connor tells of spending the first three months of his visit in New York and of a trip in the fall to Chicago, where he addressed the Irish Fellowship club. He believed his views on the Irish question were shared by 90 to 95 per cent of the men of the Irish race in the latter city. Then he placed himself at the disposal of the National Security League.

Two Interviews With President
"I paid several visits to Washington, especially at moments when matters became critical at home and when it was necessary to explain the attitude of my party," he writes.

"Among the experiences I recollect with the greatest pleasure were two interviews with the president and especially an interview I had with him immediately before my departure. I had been a student of his writings and speeches for many years and, though I had never met him before, I felt as though I was acquainted with his thought and temperament. I must add that my personal interviews with him had, however, the effect of changing some of the impressions which are suggested by his public appearance and especially by his photographs.

"The president of the photograph and the president of the living flesh and blood seen close at hand are almost a contradiction. The severity of feature in the photograph entirely disappears when they are seated opposite him."

"Let me sum up my impressions from a private interview, by saying that he is a man of perfect simplicity, transparent sincerity, rigid adhesion to well thought-out principles and a most Celtic impulsiveness and warmth of feeling, tempered rather than controlled by the cautious side of his partially Scotch-Irish ancestors. Indeed, to me he is much more dominantly Celt than Scotch-Irish. Of course, I am not at liberty to reveal his expression, except to say that I regard him as a genuine and sincere friend of Ireland."

Returning home at the urgent request of Mr. Dillon and bring a message of cheer to everybody in Europe on our side, by the account I can give of the splendid spirit of the American people and I rejoice above all that my visit extended to the time when the bravery and skill of the American troops vindicated the opinion I held from the beginning that America's intervention made complete victory over the forces of Germany an absolute certainty."

SOUVENIRS FROM "OVER THERE"

The Merrimack street show windows of the Chalfoux store caused much comment today, by reason of the souvenirs from "over there" which are displayed.

These include a German private's hat, German watches, cigar cutter, belt and buckles, these last two with the inevitable "Gott Mit Uns" engraved on the plate.

Some very interesting relics and souvenirs of France, contributed by Arthur J. Messier, 14th Engineers, Co. B, are also displayed.

RURAL EXPRESS LINE

Secretary John J. O'Rourke, of the board of trade, has written to the National Truck committee of New York regarding the feasibility of establishing a rural express line between Lowell and surrounding towns in order to provide farmers and gardeners a facile avenue for the distribution of their products.

At the present time, most of the farmers who do business in the city do it by automobile truck but the new plan would be to have the transportation on an organized basis.

MEETING OF SCHOOL GARDEN SUPERVISORS, COUNTY LEADERS AND CLUB MEMBERS

Miss Alice T. Lee of this city was present at an important and interesting meeting of school garden supervisors, county leaders, club leaders and club members in Amherst last Friday.

George L. Ealey, state director of school garden work and club activities, presided. Plans for the work of 1919 were discussed and formulated. Those taking part in the program besides Miss Lee were Mr. Howarth of Fitchburg, Mr. Track of Springfield, Mr. Rice of Amherst and Miss Louise Fay of Waltham.

PICTURE OF KAISER WRECKED BY SAILOR

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., July 29.—A life-sized painting of Emperor William, presented by him to Theodore Roosevelt several years ago, came to grief when a party of citizens visited the home of its possessor, Mrs. C. H. Pollitz, here today.

The picture had been given to the public library by the colonel and hung there until after the sinking of the Lusitania, when it was relegated to the cellar. Mrs. Pollitz offered $5 for the painting to the trustees and became its owner. The incident was forgotten until the death of Lieut. Quentin Roosevelt and then the villagers recalled it. They organized a party today and, going to the home of Mrs. Pollitz, demanded the picture.

Mr. Pollitz wanted to give it up, but Mrs. Pollitz wanted to keep it, members of the party said. In the struggle a sailor put his foot through it.

NEWS OF THE CHURCHES

Next Friday will be the first Friday of the month and will be observed with the usual services by the local Catholic churches. Special masses in the morning and holy hour devotions in the evening will form the nucleus of the observance. Confessions will be heard Thursday afternoon and evening.

Congregants at all the masses at the Catholic churches of the city were asked to pray yesterday for the repose of the souls of the Lowell boys whose deaths in France were reported last week.

St. Patrick's
Rev. John L. Curtin celebrated the late mass at St. Patrick's church yesterday. At the early mass the young boys of the parish went to communion. The usual first Friday services will be held this week.

Immaculate Conception
The O.M.I. Cadets, fanned and hearty after their weekly encampment at Millington, returned to their home barracks late yesterday afternoon with the news that the 1918 encampment was the best ever held. The young soldiers passed a most enjoyable week under the direction of Rev. Denis A. Sullivan, O.M.I., their spiritual director. Maj. Joseph F. Boyd, Jr., their commanding officer, and "Matt" McCann, physical director, Rev. James McCarlin, O.M.I., celebrated the late mass yesterday.

St. Peter's
Rev. Peter Linahan celebrated the late mass at St. Peter's church yesterday and the pastor, Rev. Daniel J. Kolcher, Ph.D., made the announcements. The Immaculate Conception sodality will receive communion in a body at the 7.30 o'clock mass next Sunday. The usual first Friday services will be held with masses at 5 and 7 o'clock.

Sacred Heart
Rev. John P. Flynn, O.M.I., the pastor, celebrated the 11 o'clock mass at the Sacred Heart church yesterday. The Children of Mary received communion in a body at the 8.30 o'clock mass. The children of Mary Red Cross chapter will meet Tuesday evening for sewing in the parish school. Masses on Friday will be at 5, 6, 7 and 8 o'clock. This morning a requiem mass in memory of the late Private Francis M. McOsker, who was killed in France, was celebrated at 9 o'clock.

St. Columba's
The usual masses were celebrated at St. Columba's church yesterday. Rev. Patrick J. Hally, the pastor, celebrated the early mass and a large number of the faithful received communion.

St. Margaret's
Rev. Fr. Brock, S.J., celebrated the late mass at St. Margaret's church yesterday morning. Rev. Charles J.

Galligan, the pastor, celebrated the early mass.

Lakeview Chapel
Rev. Michael C. Gilbride celebrated the 10 o'clock mass at Lakeview chapel yesterday and there was a very large attendance. A musical program was carried out with John F. McGlinchey at the organ and the soloists were Miss Margaret McDonough and John T. Baxter.

Calvary Baptist
The usual services were held at the Calvary Baptist church. The topic for the morning service was, "The Great Revival Needed," and "The Coming Golden Age," was the sermon for the evening, preached by the pastor, Rev. Asa Reed Ditts.

Chelmsford Street Baptist
Rev. Elmer F. West, the pastor, was the speaker at the morning service at the Chelmsford Street Baptist church yesterday. At noon the regular session of the bible school was held. Anne's church yesterday. His subject was taken from Job, "Ask Them That Go by the Way." This was testing the theories by the facts and experiences of life. There was singing by the regular choir, also by the Guild of St. Cecilia. Rev. Mr. Grannis will conduct the morning services again next Sunday. The candidates' class of the Girls Friendly will hold no more Friday afternoon meetings until September. The Camp Fire girls will go for a week's outing at Massapoag pond, about the last week in August. Arrangements are being made now and a meeting will be held at the parish house on Thursday, July 29, and all interested are invited to attend.

St. John's Episcopal
Rev. James Bancroft, the pastor, at the morning service, at St. John's Episcopal church yesterday, took his text from Deut. 12:10, "And Now O Israel, What Doth the Lord, thy God, Require of Thee." There was also a short address at the evening service.

Jewish Synagogues
The usual exercises and services were held at the Jewish Synagogues on Saturday.

Swedish Lutheran
Rev. Peter E. Nordgren, the pastor, spoke on "Christ or the World," at the morning service at the Swedish Lutheran church, yesterday. In the evening his topic was, "Labor, Love and Hope." The Birthday society will meet next Wednesday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Borge in Chelmsford.

Highland M.E.
"Turn Not Aside from the Path" was the topic of Rev. R. W. Hutchinson's address at the Highland Methodist Episcopal church yesterday morning.

St. Paul's M.E.
Rev. J. L. Cairns, the pastor, spoke on "The Kingdom of God is Within You" at the morning service at St. Paul's Methodist church yesterday. Bible school was held at noon.

First Primitive Methodist
Rev. N. W. Matthews pastor, preached at the First Primitive Methodist church, on Sunday morning to a good sized audience. The choir gave good service in the musical portion. The pastor's theme was, "The Living Church and Membership." Matt. 5:16. "Let your light so shine that men may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

Rev. Mr. Matthews states that the times were never more urgent than the present for the church to rise to her great opportunities in the fulfillment of her mission to the world.

Much depends upon fidelity to God. Rev. Dr. Grannis preached in the evening service to a good gathering. He discussed the much needed modification of the church's attitude toward the progress of mankind in all departments of life. This church will continue its regular services morning and evening through the summer.

Lawrence Street Primitive Methodist
"Hiding from God" was the topic of the sermon preached by Rev. John Singleton, pastor of the Lawrence Street Primitive Methodist church, yesterday morning. The evening service was in the form of a short talk on "The Perils of the Christian Life," Gal. 3:1. Next Saturday afternoon the Girl Scouts are planning to go to Crowders Ferry, where they will be the guests of the Girl Scouts of St. George church of Methuen. They will be in charge of Mrs. Joe Spencer.

First Presbyterian
Rev. J. M. Craig, preached at the First Presbyterian church yesterday morning in the absence of the pastor, Rev. J. K. Kennedy. His topic was, "Hope for the Fallen." Last evening he spoke on "Duty of the Citizen to the State and of the State to the Citizen." This service was held at the Westminster church, in the form of a union meeting.

Seamen and Firemen on Great Lakes Yield to Chairman Hurley's Appeal

Latter Orders Carriers' Association to Meet Certain Demands of Men

WASHINGTON, July 29.—Orders calling off the threatened strike of seamen and firemen on the Great Lakes, set for today, were issued yesterday by Victor A. Olander, secretary of the Sailors' union of the Great Lakes, and other union leaders, following a conference with Chairman Hurley of the shipping board.

The decision to call off the strike followed a two-hour conference between the union leaders and officers of the shipping board. It was pointed out again to the men that a tieup of lake shipping would interrupt food shipments to the soldiers overseas, in addition to hampering war operations through interference with the movement of coal and ore.

The union men protested against any modification of the nation's appeal, for men for merchant ships, which the Lake Carriers' association Saturday had agreed to sign if changed to apply to the Atlantic and the Gulf. Mr. Olander asserted such modification would exempt the lake shipowners and insisted that a change would make the strike situation more serious.

Insistence by union leaders on this point was met by Mr. Hurley sending to William Livingstone, president of the association, this telegram: "United States shipping board hereby directs the members of the Lake Carriers' association as an association to sign the nation's appeal for men to man its merchant ships as originally drafted and without any changes."

The other complaint of the men that the registration of seamen at the association's shipping offices or assembly rooms permitted the shipowners to discriminate against the men and compel them to join the association's welfare plan was met by Mr. Hurley asking that the practice be suspended pending further negotiations.

Independent shipowners on the Great Lakes and the unions were called upon by Mr. Hurley to send representatives to Washington next Wednesday for a conference on the pending wage demands of seamen, firemen and stewards.

MONARCHIST CONGRESS

Plans Re-establishment of Imperial Regime in Russia Under Duke Nicholas

AMSTERDAM, July 29.—The recent monarchist congress at Kiev resolved to form centers throughout Russia for the re-establishment of the imperial regime on the lines of the Ukraine and Great Russian and under Grand Duke Nicholas Nicolaevitch, according to brief details received here. Kiev newspapers report a recrudescence of the activities of the Black Hundred.

When confirmation of the death of the former emperor was received in Kiev, many Russian officers were seen with crepe wound about their crosses of St. George. When his execution was first denied a crowded thanksgiving service was held in the Kiev cathedral and the people sang the ancient hymn: "God, Protect the Czar." The arch-priest during the celebration of the mass declared: "The church stands outside politics but it is besting all true believing Russians to pray for Nicholas, the servant of God."

He spoke of the impending re-establishment of the monarchy and the dynasty.

After the service there was bloody fighting in the streets of Kiev between the monarchists and bolsheviks.

DROWNING ACCIDENT AT LAKEVIEW

Another fatality was added to the season's drowning accidents Saturday afternoon, the place being Lake Massacupp near Willow Dale, and the victim Robert J. Blakely, aged 21, of 20 Apple street, Lowell.

Blakely, in company with Heve Jacques of 7 Dumpsey place and George Flanders of 592 Gorham street, was spending his afternoon canoeing, and all went well until the water became so rough that the canoe capsized.

Blakely seemed unable to swim, and the best efforts put forth to save him by his companions, only resulted in failure. The patrol was summoned, and Inspector Martin Maher arrived with the pulmotor, but his efforts to revive Blakely were of no avail. The body was viewed by Medical Examiner T. B. Smith, after which it was taken to the undertaking rooms of George W. Healey in this city.

Blakely was a Lowell resident, and was employed as gauging inspector at the South Lowell plant of the U. S. Cartridge Co. He had just been called in the draft, and resided with his wife, Martha, and his mother, Nora F. His father, James Blakely, who is well known here as a blacksmith, and a Spanish War veteran, is now serving with the Canadian army in France.

A. G. POLLARD COMPANY

—THE STORE FOR THRIFTY PEOPLE—

The success of our store-wide July Markdowns as evidenced by the most remarkable selling in the piece goods departments during the past few days, prompts us to reiterate the statement that this great merchandise movement is the most important Money Saving Event ever presented at this season of the year—come the next three selling days with the thought of finding in each department in this big store something which you can buy at even less than we paid for it—merchandise cheaper by far than the cost of producing it today. Watch for the Markdown Cards—they're pink.

THE LOWELL SUN

JOHN H. HARRINGTON, Proprietor

AN INSULT TO OUR ARMY

Much comment has been caused throughout the country by the plank adopted by the New York republican convention on universal military training. It appears that in this part of the platform the writer went out of his way to reflect upon the military forces of the United States, including General Pershing, General March and other able and conscientious men identified with the regular army. The military plank is as follows:—

"We call upon the United States government to establish without delay a universal military training system of universal military training for national service. A free nation must be defended and represented by a trained army of free men. For democracy to hire mercenaries to fight its battles is as grotesque as it would be to hire mercenaries to cast its vote."

To hint that Gen. Pershing, Gen. Scott, Gen. March, or any of the other devoted West Pointers who have built up our volunteer regular army are mercenaries is an insult to the men who bear the responsibility of defending the nation in time of war.

The republicans of New York must have been hard up for campaign issues since they had to resort to such extreme language.

In military history the word "mercenary" is applied to the bands of soldiers whose military services are sold to hard pressed monarchies at a stated price. In this light there is nothing mercenary in the present system under which military necessity has caused the government to adopt the selective draft. As for the compensation provided for the drafted soldiers, surely the republicans do not think it is so liberal as to justify a term so insulting as "mercenary."

The New York republicans, it would seem, are pressing today for the adoption of the Prussian military system in this country, but it may be that after the war, the volunteer regular army will suffice for national defense, whether in the opinion of republicans they are mercenary, although by the people of the United States they are understood to be patriots who have volunteered to give their lives, if necessary, in defense of the flag.

There is a degree of snobbery in this plank of the republican platform that should meet an emphatic rebuff from the self-respecting citizens of New York state. Neither Gen. Pershing nor any of the other West Point men, nor even the rank and file of the army, regular or drafted, can in any degree be characterized as mercenary; and hence this epithet will be hurled back in the face of its authors as an insult to the men who are laying down their lives on the altar of patriotism for the vindication of American rights and the freedom of the world.

INTERVENTION IN RUSSIA

President Wilson has at last consented to intervention in Russia and as he was criticised for delay in declaring war, so will he now be criticised for delay in agreeing to such intervention.

President Wilson, however, knows what he is doing. He has sources of information which the public has not and hence those who criticise him in this respect will do so blindly.

The president wanted because it was necessary to wait until the Russian people would have time to realize that the Bolshevik regime does not represent the Russian people, but on the contrary appears to be working in the interests of Germany.

There is then the question whether the Soviets represent the people; but they are under the influence of the Bolshevik elements. In the Russian municipalities the Zemstvos in their local and district bodies do represent the people, as do the Constituent assembly, also suppressed by the Bolshevik government. Where the municipalities and the Zemstvos have been suppressed, they should be re-established, as representing the people. By co-operating with these bodies, the Allies can help Russia to drive out the enemies of freedom and establish democratic government.

It is believed the plans adopted by President Wilson for bringing aid to the Russian people, will have the desired effect without giving Germany an opportunity to mislead them into the belief that the Japanese and Americans enter as invaders. The move is one of essential importance in saving Russia from German oppression. It is plain from the terms of peace recently put out by Russia that her intention is to exploit that nation for her own benefit. That is something the allies will never permit, even though their insistence upon the rights of Russia should prolong the war.

TELEGRAPH AND TELEPHONE

Now that the government has taken over the telegraph and telephone wires, the obvious thing to do is what heretofore the government would not permit private owners to do—organize competing systems into one system.

Two wire systems in a city are merely a source of confusion and expense. Under private ownership there was public objection to consolidation because in too many cases competing telephone companies wanted to include in new capitalization all the water in both stocks, and make the public pay interest on it.

Now there is the chance to consolidate on actual value without robbing anybody. With the wire system the expense and confusion of making a show of competition can be eliminated. There is the possibility also of substituting the scientific automatic phone for the manual phone. By proper management, it may be possible to put a phone in every home with service at a penny a call. That, however, would not be possible under present conditions of the labor market, if the cost of labor and material be considered. The government as a rule has to pay high prices for both. But very likely the first change the public will appreciate in towns having two phone systems will be the connection of the two switchboards so that a person having one phone can call up anybody else having either phone. Once the people try out the new plan, they will never again stand for the old.

TRIBUTE TO OUR SOLDIERS

In a special despatch to the New York World, Col. Repington, the British military critic, pays a high compliment to the fighting qualities of our American troops when he says that "second only to the depression of German morale, I count the famous fighting of the new American troops as the most splendid encouragement of the past week." This critic points out that there could be no doubt as to the eminent fighting ability of the first American divisions that landed in France; but the relative inexperience of the later arrivals left the question open to doubt; yet even these, says this expert, "have shown that they can fight like tigers and obey orders and remain disciplined."

Our American troops have been sent across in masses in response to appeals from the Allies, but this critic expresses the opinion which we believe is timely and sound, that it would be a very grave mistake if through enthusiasm or impatience in the cause of the allies, these new divisions were rushed into battle without the proper training, necessary to make them fit for the terrific warfare now in progress in France. Col. Repington believes it would be a mistake to waste this great American asset in a premature offensive on a large scale.

As General Foch is still without the preponderance of well trained troops to justify a great offensive, there is a great temptation to draw prematurely upon the new arrivals from the United States, not over one-half of whom have completed the necessary training. It is presumed, however, that General Foch, always careful of his men, will not call for the rest of the American troops until such time as they have gone through the realistic training behind the lines to enable them to cope with all the deceptive devices and strategies of German warfare.

WORK OR FIGHT

Premier Lloyd George of England has thrown down the gauntlet to the thousands of strikers who have left the munition factories. He has done only what the vital interests of the empire demand, in announcing that if the men are idle today they will be drafted forthwith for service in the war.

Why should one set of men be privileged to go idle in order to compel concessions sometimes unreasonable, while others are obliged to sacrifice their lives in defense of the nation?

"They have ceased work," says the premier, "not in pursuance of a trade dispute, but in an endeavor to force the government to change a national policy essential to the prosecution of the war."

These strikers have been granted exemption from military service because their labor in the munition factories was considered of greater value to the government. If these services are terminated, then naturally the exemption they carried is also terminated. The premier has taken the right stand. While the nation is fighting for its existence, it cannot afford to put up with any such nonsense as strikes, which would paralyze the factories on which the army and navy must depend for the munitions of war. If the war continues much longer with its present fury, the United States government may have to adopt the same policy.

OUR WAR HEROES

It appears that our Lowell boys have been in the hot of the fight as they have always been whenever the country has needed their services.

Already five of our boys have been reported as killed in action in the recent operations in France, and undoubtedly the list will grow as the months go by and the titanic struggle progresses. Corp. Joseph Worth, Privates, Francis McOsker, Philip Chalifoux, Arthur McOsker and Frank Lyons have laid down their lives in the cause of freedom while the list of wounded will undoubtedly include a number of Lowell soldiers.

To the bereaved families the sympathy of this city goes out in full measure. Few there are who can realize what all this means until some such loss comes home to themselves.

We see many homes displaying the service flags with stars indicating the number of men who have left those homes for service in the war. We fear that many of these flags will hereafter show golden stars to mark the homes which have given martyrs to the cause of world freedom. If the struggle continues for a year or two years, we must expect the sacrifices to be exceedingly great. Yet this cannot be helped. There is no other way of saving the freedom of our own land and at the same time extending that freedom to the entire world.

Lumping Them On

A tiny Kokomo girl has made it her custom to enumerate by name all the members of the family and the close friends, in her evening prayers, but at the close of a strenuous day of play last week she was tired, and after the opening petition she yawned, then added sleepily: "And please just bless the whole bunch."—Indianapolis News.

Historical Data

Little Johnny, who had been studying history but a short time, thought he would give his grandfather a tryout on the subject, and asked: "Say, grandpa, what great war broke out in 1580?"

The old gentleman laid down his paper and looked thoughtfully at the boy for a moment, and then a sudden light dawned upon him.

"Why," he said, "that was the year I married your grandmother."—Harper's Magazine.

The Wise Witness

Appropos of a celebrated dynamite case in San Francisco, lawyers are telling of the experience of a prosecuting attorney who encountered a somewhat difficult witness. Finally he asked the man if he was acquainted with any of the men on the jury.

"Yes, sir," announced the witness, "more than half of them."

"Are you willing to swear that you know more than half of them?" demanded the lawyer.

"Why, if it comes to that, I'm willing to swear that I know more than half of them put together."—Pittsburg Chronicle Telegraph.

Honor's Roll

When all is said and done you've got to hand a lot of credit for the good war food showing to the several hundred thousand American girls and boys who belong to pig and poultry clubs in the agricultural districts of all states these clubs may be found, the boys running the pig clubs and the girls increasing the meat and egg supply with their poultry clubs. It is estimated that the boys' pig clubs have not only increased this year's pork production but have given the big American ham and bacon industry a decided boost. Next generation's farmers will grow richer because they belong to pig clubs now. That means more meat for city eaters. A year or so ago Hoover urged every person who could to grow a pig, and farmers to grow more than they ever did before. That was the quickest way of increasing the nation's meat supply, and meat we must have if we are going to work our hardest here at home and fight our best ever there. The response was heavy. But the largest portion of the increase is directly due to the efforts of the farm girls and boys and their pig and poultry clubs. So, it is altogether proper that you give 'em a thought and a bit of mental thanks when you eat your ham and—or your breakfast—bacon.

Was Pershing's Mommy

Back in Laclede, Mo., when John Pershing was just a little chap they called her "Black Battle Lewis." Now it seems she is Mrs. Gilliam, having married since leaving the old town that gave birth to America's field commander to come to Kansas City and engage in housework and washing. She remembers John quite well. His mother wasn't a strong woman, and the negro servants who worked in the Pershing home had many tasks in connection with the children. She knew that John was in the army, but she hadn't heard just what his rank was or where he was stationed. Even after she was told she did not appear to be impressed. "I sure slapped that boy many a times," she said with a grin. "He was full of tricks—O, he was! Always into something all the time. His brother Jim was more blonde and quiet, like his mother. But John was a terror."

"One time he made a little sled and coasted it down hill right smack into me—on purpose. But you couldn't make nothin' off John. If you slapped him he'd hit you back—yes, he would. If I slapped him today, maybe he'd bust me tomorrow. I don't care how little a slap it was he'd get it back on you."

"And tease—O my soul! He used to sing a colored folks song just to get me mad; something about coming from the cotton and the corn. I can't exactly remember it, but it sure used to make me mad, and he knewed it."

"Black Battle" reflected. It was many years ago. She is an old woman now, but still working out. Slowly a grin resolved itself into a chuckle.

"Said one time he'd kill me—sure did. Used to call me nigger. O, he was full of tricks. Used to wash him and dress him and put him to bed and get him up and send him to school. Used to fight and kick when he had to put on his good clothes. Jim was quiet, like his mother. Had to fight with John all the time. Couldn't get him up a-mornin'."

"Seemed like he was always workin' on something, though. Always busy. My sister worked for the Pershings, too. They was fine people; always had help around the house. They said John was smart in school."

"I remember him just a little after he went away. He'd come back to town in summer time. They said he was awful smart. In a hell know who it is. I'll remember me. I guess he ought to be the way he used to lambast me around."

Mrs. Gilliam for several years has worked in Kansas City, and is reputed to be one of the best cooks in the city. —Kansas City Star.

FATHER AND SON CROSS THE GREAT DIVIDE

An unusually sad instance of the poignancy of death is brought to light in the passing of Thomas P. Mullin and Thomas M. Mullin, father and son, of 33 Pleasant street, within 24 hours of each other. The senior Mr. Mullin was struck by an automobile at Church and George streets a week ago, causing a fracture of the skull which resulted in his death Saturday. Yesterday, his son passed away at his home. The younger man was but 31 years old. The family is well known, and the double burden will be shared by a host of sorrowful friends. Surviving members of the family are: Mrs. Bridget Mullin, James J. of New Bedford, Lawrence H., Robert and George, Mrs. Mary Callahan, the Misses Annie, Margaret, Agnes and Celia Mullin.

MAN DEPENDENT ON ACCOUNT OF BEING DRAFTED, COMMIT'S SUICIDE

Walter Dzura, 18 Hugh street, Centerville, committed suicide early yesterday morning by slashing his throat. It is understood that he was threatened on account of having been drafted and was worried about the welfare of his wife and child if he should be compelled to serve in the army. The ambulance was called but upon its arrival at 7:40 the man was dead and the body was removed to the rooms of Undertakers Charles H. Molloy's Sons.

TRY THIS TONIC FOR STUBBORN ILLS OF THE STOMACH

Some forms of stomach trouble that do not yield to ordinary treatment often respond to the tonic treatment that builds up the system, strengthens the nerves that control the digestive processes and gives the stomach a supply of rich, red blood.

"My stomach was out of order," says Mr. Albert J. Snell, whose address is R. F. D. No. 69, Bemus Point, N. Y., and my appetite was so poor that I did not care for food. There was constantly a gnawing pain in my stomach. I got but little nourishment and soon was completely run-down. I couldn't sleep nor rest well, although I craved it and my eyes ached. My complexion and the whites of my eyes had a sallow, jaundice-like color. I grew so weak and shaky that I could hardly put one foot ahead of the other and my back was weak and sore. I then tried several medicines without benefit, until I took Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. A few boxes showed me that they were adapted to my trouble and they entirely relieved me. I work hard every day and have never been troubled with my stomach since."

So many dyspeptics have been helped by this simple treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills that every sufferer from indigestion should try it. Good digestion is impossible without a supply of rich, red blood and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills actually build up the blood to do this.

The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Schenectady, N. Y., has issued a free book "Will to Eat and Live to Eat" that should be in every home. It gives just the information that you want regarding your diet. The company will mail Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, postpaid, at 50 cents per box or your own druggist can supply you. Do not pay more.

COAL BULLETIN NO. 22

Cut this out and paste it up and next winter take a look at it, and remember that in the year 1918 on the twenty-ninth day of July we told you steam coal would be short in Lowell and that you should protect yourself by placing an order with us and thereby insure the running of your plant and uninterrupted work for your employees. Better take our advice and come in and make arrangements to clear of trouble when the snow blows and the ice hinders traffic. We are in a position to take care of you now, but we don't know about the future, if you delay your orders too long. A word to the wise is sufficient.

We have a lot of hard coal running and pretty soon our trucks will be going full fill for your anthracite bins. We will get the coal. Yours for power and heat next winter.

FIGHT WITH SUB U. S. CASUALTIES

Passengers on British Liner Tell of Battle Off the New Jersey Coast

Ship in Same Convoy With Ill-fated Justicia—Fired on U. S. Submarine

AN ATLANTIC PORT, July 29.—Passengers on a British liner arriving here yesterday said that last Friday their ship gave battle to a German U-boat 750 miles off the New Jersey coast and Friday night fired three shots at what is now believed to have been an American submarine. Apparently neither undersea craft was hit.

The liner was one of several which were being conveyed with the giant Justicia when that vessel was torpedoed and sunk off the north Irish coast on July 20. According to the passengers, a torpedo which hit the Justicia passed astern of their own ship, and narrowly missed another merchantman before finding its goal.

T. H. Butt of Augusta, Ga., a brother of Maj. Archibald Butt, once aide to President Taft, who lost his life on the Titanic, described the liner's three encounters with submarines.

The first, he said, came on July 19, two days after the merchantman, conveyed by destroyers, left a British port. The booming of guns and the shrieking of whistles brought the passengers to the deck.

"The sea was smooth as we took our stations at the lifeboats," said Mr. Butt. "We crowded on all steam and zig-zagged in company with our conveying destroyers. We left the scene in a race to save ourselves. We heard during the night that the Justicia and destroyers were fighting the U-boats and later learned that her struggle to survive had failed."

Mr. Butt said that the ship met no more submarines until last Friday at noon, when 750 miles off the New Jersey coast the call to quarters was again sounded and the ship's guns began firing at an object apparently several miles away.

"This was a super-submarine," said Mr. Butt. "It made no attempt to come nearer and after firing solid shot, which fell short at least 1000 yards, began to fire scarpel."

The exchange of shots lasted about 45 minutes, according to Mr. Butt, who said the U-boat then submerged and was not seen again.

At the same, he said, another submarine engaged a British freighter in the same waters and it was thought the U-boat was sunk. "If so, the Britisher got a good one," said Mr. Butt. "For these boats are super-submarines, which depend more on destruction by gunfire than by torpedoes."

"We got our next shock last night," he said. "In a smooth sea a big submarine broke water not three miles away and at once our gunners fired three shots at the boat while our commander signalled, 'Who are you?' The shots fell close to the boat and we could see the flutter of flags, but no sign of a flag to denote the nationality of the U-boat. Finally our commander signalled to the gun crews to cease firing and we came on, leaving the submarine on the surface."

Among the passengers were Captain John H. Pratt and the crew of 37 of the American steamship George L. Eaton, which was abandoned June 22 in European waters, leaking.

BRILLIANT PUSH BY AMERICAN FORCES

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY ON THE AISNE-MARNE FRONT, July 29. (By A. P.)—The German line is again north of the Ourcq river and Fere-en-Tardenois, which has been entered by French troops, is at the mercy of the allies. The tightening of the flanks holds promise that the retreat will be continued.

The line along the greater part of the bottom of the Soissons-Rheims salient has been pushed forward in some places as much as five miles.

The Germans are bringing into play their artillery in force to check the plunges of the Franco-American troops. The Americans have played a brilliant part in the advance, which included the occupation of Serzy, on the north bank of the river, and a number of small villages.

The line tonight follows the Ourcq river to Serzy and to Goussancourt, the latter place lying about six miles north of the Marne.

The Germans offered bitter resistance, but not to compare with that which began late yesterday for the retention of the higher ground farther north of the river. There they supplemented their defenses with artillery fire reaching over the American front lines to the supports, the volume of fire at times attaining enormous proportions.

Unwaveringly the Americans held their ground and even advanced slightly, while the French on the sectors to the right and left resisted as steadily.

From behind the advancing line the allied heavy guns kept up a continuous bombardment throughout the day, shelling the German positions where the airmen reported troop concentration.

YESTERDAY'S LIST OF 225 LARGEST SINCE U. S. ENTERED WAR—WEEK'S TOTAL, 1050

Total Casualties in Army and Navy up to Yesterday Aggregate 13,766

WASHINGTON, July 29.—Heavy fighting along the Aisne and Marne, in which American troops have participated, has begun to show in the casualty lists issued by the War department. Yesterday's list of 225 names is the longest to be given out since American units made their appearance on the battle front. The list, however, it was believed, gives casualties resulting from the recent German offensive operations rather than from the Allied counter stroke now in progress.

The total casualties in the army and marine corps overseas increased 1050 during the week, compared with 882 the previous week, and aggregates 13,766 with the inclusion of today's army list of 225 and the marine corps list of two. The week's increase also was the largest yet recorded.

The army casualties summary as officially announced follows: Killed in action (including 291 at sea), 2069.

Died of wounds, 745. Died of disease, 1455. Died of accident and other causes, 570.

Wounded in action, 6640. Missing in action, 657. Totals to date, 11,730.

The official summary of marine corps casualties follows: Deaths, 710. Wounded, 1182.

In hands of enemy, 49. Missing, 79. Total to date, 1986. Officers included in the marine corps summary were 58.

The army summary does not distinguish officers from enlisted men.

TWO MEN ARRESTED FOR PRODUCING LIQUOR FOR SOLDIERS

John Bestren of Fall River was arrested in this city yesterday and was locked up on a charge of supplying liquor to soldiers. Walenty Szarak, who also tried his hand as a dispenser of the forbidden liquid, found himself locked up before the day was over. Both men will be taken to Camp Devens where their cases will be looked into by the federal authorities.

ROOKIES AT CAMP DEVENS CHEER WAR TALK BY THE GOVERNOR OF MAINE

CAMP DEVENS, July 23.—Fifteen thousand recruits, some of them with army hats or khaki shirts or trench shoes to show they are no longer civilians, shouted, cheered, applauded and sang in a way to split the heavens wide open when Gov. Carl E. Milliken of Maine last night addressed two big outdoor meetings which savored of Billy Sunday tubercular rallies in their language.

They even applauded Chaplain S. S. Robins at the conclusion of his prayer. But it was when Gov. Milliken, who followed the 2800 draftees from the Pine Tree State to camp, declared that "the principle of brutal autocracy cannot live in the world so long as the flag which has been carried from America to the western front still flies" that the thousands of rookies too loose in a fashion that wouldn't be comforting to German ears.

Spirit of '76 Still Lives

They yelled again when the governor told them that they have taken their place in history by coming here to don Uncle Sam's clothes. "America is stepping in," he said, "to give decisive force to the battle of our noble allies. America is making its immense contribution in material, its magnificent contribution in courage, manly but want you to notice that most all the American contribution is a contribution of spirit and soul. And they said that the soul of America was dead, drowned in a flood of gold! They didn't know that the spirit of the few men who gathered 47 years ago in a little building in Philadelphia to sign a scrap of paper was still alive!"

Mrs. A. B. Hitchcock of Concord, wife of Maj. Hitchcock, sang solos, the only woman in a meeting of these thousands of soldiers, and was applauded as no soloist who has faced an audience at Devens has been. Two recruits, still in khaki, furnished the features of the meeting, recruit Raymond McCormick, who had brought his cornet from his Springfield home, and recruit Walter Merritt of North Danville, N. H., a violinist.

The meetings were arranged by the Y.M.C.A. and were held in natural outdoor amphitheatres in the Depot Brigade area in the thousands stood and sang the "Battle Hymn of the Republic," Gov. Milliken said he was thrilled as no other of the hundreds of audiences he has faced has ever thrilled him.

New Pass Regulations

Beginning this morning, all persons not in the army are going to find it difficult to do business inside the cantonment without complying with a new set of regulations issued by Col. Geo. M. Byroade, camp commander. Hereafter all salesmen, tailors, barbers and even volunteer chaplains and Y.M.C.A. workers whose business brings them into the camp regularly must carry passes bearing their photographs.

These passes are being issued only by the camp intelligence office after investigation. The personal record of those desiring passes will be looked into.

SWELTERING IN DRILLS AT CAMP HANCOCK

AUGUSTA, Ga., July 23.—It is hot down in Georgia. Nobody is more uncomfortably aware of that fact than Private Smith and his tens of thousands of comrades who swelter through drills at Camp Hancock, near Augusta.

A big army cantonment is not a summer resort, especially in the southland. The sun is always on the job. It is not easy to get away from it. There is much dust. The men toiling at the task of learning how to kill Germans, work and play, eat and sleep in an atmosphere always more or less dusty.

Support you were one of these boys. Suppose all day you had been bucketed through infantry tactics or hammered through bayonet attacks on make-believe boches. What would you want more than anything else in the world as you liked back to your basking quarters for an all-too-brief hunk of meat and a tepid shower? An ocean, a lake, a pond, of course—any body of cool water big enough to get into.

Viewing with expert eye Camp Hancock and its perspiring thousands war camp community service saw this, realized what a boon would be a bathing place, and because it is the business of war camp community service to provide what is good for soldiers' minds and bodies, set about to make a reality out of the dream of these men in khaki.

Today Camp Hancock bathes, Camp Hancock swims, dives, and otherwise disports itself in clear, cool water. A walk of ten minutes from the center of camp and the soldier may plunge overhead with such gratification as can be imagined only by those who have dipped in lake or sea after a taxing day of work and heat.

It came about thus—more accommodation which has brought to pass in hundreds of communities adjacent to the great military camps. "The organization's man in the field found a lake. It was an artificial body of water two and a half miles from Augusta, built as part of a real estate development which for one reason or another, was not a success. This lake, known as Lake Aunond, served no purpose except to breed mosquitoes and worry the United States Public Health service. The shores were lined with sedge and water lilies, the better the great Egyptian variety which blossoms a foot across. The lake was pretty to look at, but the war camp community service man was interested in thousands of soldiers-in-the-making, not in waterscapes. He set to work. The lake was turned over to the men. On a dam which cuts the ten acre body of water about in the middle, stands a commodious 600 men at a time. It is equipped with a box locker system. Bathing trunks are sold at cost. A canteen supplies soft drinks, sandwiches and smokes. Leaving the bath-house, a man may drop into the water from either side, and enjoy himself as long as he will, all for nothing.

The lake is leased by the war camp community service. The United States public health service has ended his worries as to mosquitoes by cleaning out all the water lilies and sedge, at a cost of several thousand dollars. The United States bureau of fisheries has stocked the lake with top-minnows; these are to war on any mosquito larvae remaining. Military police keep order. A battery of machine guns safeguards the health of bathers.

So Private Smith—the endless procession of him that will tread the sun-baked ways of Camp Hancock before this war is done—will be a heater and a lot more comfortable soldier because of war camp community service.

PRIV. JOSEPH SULLIVAN WOUNDED IN FRANCE

Another Lowell boy has been severely wounded in France. Private Joseph Sullivan, headquarters company, 101st regiment, in France, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph P. Sullivan of 223 Cross street, is the latest soldier from this city to figure in the casualty list. His parents have received a telegram telling of his being wounded.

Private Sullivan enlisted in May, 1917, at the outbreak of the war, and was first stationed at Keene, N. H. Later he went to camp at Framingham, where he was a member of the old Sixth regiment. He was later transferred to the old Ninth regiment and went to Camp Devens, whence he sailed to France early in September.

The wounded man is 20 years old. A brother, Daniel, left for Camp Devens last Wednesday to enter the national army.

JACK DEMPSEY BEATS FULTON IN FIRST

HARRISON PARK, N. J., July 23.—Jack Dempsey, who claims California as his residential State, won a surprisingly quick victory over Fred Fulton, the Rochester, Minn., heavyweight, in 23 seconds, at the Harrison baseball park here Saturday evening.

Dempsey Makes Good

Some of Dempsey's friends who heard him say before he entered the ring that he "would knock out the big Rochester man in short order," thought Dempsey was over confident, but he made good almost as soon as the two men squared off.

Fulton towered over his opponent when Referee John P. Ehardt of Atlantic City was giving them instructions. Fulton's face wore a cynical grin, while Dempsey scowled a bit, but looked the more confident of the pair.

The moment the bell called the men from their corners, Dempsey rushed at Fulton and took the big fellow by surprise, landing a hard right swing under the head and hooking his left to the stomach. These blows made Fulton wince, and the bigger man was unable to defend himself with Dempsey at such close quarters. Fulton's long arms swung helplessly over Dempsey's head, but Dempsey sent in two short arm body blows.

Hooks and Swings

Then Jack stepped back about a foot and hooked his left to the Rochester giant's head, and swung his right to the point of Fulton's jaw. The big man tottered and fell sideways to the floor of the ring, his head resting on his right arm, which he leaned down, lower rope of the three which encircled the ring.

There was scarcely a sound from the big crowd of spectators when the referee began counting the seconds over the prostrate man. Fulton tried ineffectually to raise his head and his second carried the man to his corner.

Dempsey in the meanwhile was easily the most composed man in the ring or the arena. He walked over to Fulton's corner and took the big fellow by the hand, but Fulton was too dazed to talk coherently and seemingly was unable to realize what had happened in such a brief space of time.

Lasts 23 Seconds

The actual time that the one-sided fight lasted was 23 seconds, and Dempsey had won the right to the world's heavyweight title in case Jess Willard relinquishes claim to it in exactly 33 seconds.

When Announcer Humphries was about to introduce the men to the spectators, Dempsey, who was born at Manassa, Colo., and became known to pugilism while living in Salt Lake City, requested the announcer to say that he claimed California as his native state.

Dempsey says he is going west next week to prosecute his trade at shipbuilding and will not fight in the ring again until the war is ended.

Moving pictures of the contest were taken, and they will be presented to the government for the amusement of the United States soldiers and sailors at home and abroad.

BRITT MAKES HIT

Frankie Britt who defeated Phinney Boyle here last week, made a great hit with the local fans, and all would welcome another chance to look him over. Many of the members of the C.A.A., who saw the Britt-Boyle bout at Lawrence several months ago aver that the New Bedford whaler has greatly improved, and is now going better than ever before. Boyle, however, is still confident that he will be able to come back, and is anxious for another crack at the title holder.

Johnny Boyle and Tony Valtan have been matched for a round bout, and this bout should be well worth seeing. Both are past masters at the game, having appeared in numerous battles, and when they clash the fans ought to see some action.

George Brooks, nephew of Jimmy Gardner, who stopped Young O'Connell the other night in one round, is bound to be heard from if he follows the game.

He's a "dead ring" for his famous uncle, and his work is a treat to look upon. The left, which made Jimmy Gardner feared throughout the country, is George's right assist. His footwork and general all round boxing show that he has the "making" of a top notcher if properly handled.

SKATING RACE AT WILLOW DALE

Albert Nebes, champion roller skater of the east, and Louis Patnaude, who claims the championship of Montreal, but who is now working at the U. S. Cartridge shop, will meet in a five mile race for a side bet at Willow Dale rink on Saturday night. Both men are well trained and each is confident of winning. The rink at the lake has been reported as no longer in condition for a fast race. Admission will be free, but there will be a charge for skates.

PONIES DEFEAT BOOTT MILLS

The Ponies defeated the Boott Mills team, 3 to 2, Saturday afternoon at Shaping Park in a fast and interesting game, featured by good plays on both sides. Brennan of the Ponies was easily the star of the game, aided by one Buckley. J. Riley pitched a nice game for the ponies, it being his

HUNS RETREAT

Germans Continue to Fall Back Along Whole Line—Allies in Pursuit

LONDON, July 28.—The German retreat is continuing along the whole line, the Allies in pursuit, according to the news from the fighting in the Soissons-Rheims salient received up to noon.

The Germans have succeeded in checking to a certain extent, but not in stopping the French advance. The French are on the north bank of the Ourcq, and to the east they have secured the whole road between Rheims and Dormans. The Germans are stubbornly resisting and are burning villages.

Since yesterday the Allies have advanced between two and three miles on a 20 mile front.

The enemy has definitely abandoned the line of the Ourcq and there is little doubt now that he will go back beyond the Vesle to the line 30 miles long between Soissons and Rheims, which is probably well entrenched and has good lines of communication.

The German retirement has been quite orderly and deliberate. So far the taking of only four guns has been reported.

The Americans, particularly in the Fere-en-Tardenois sector, are pressing the Germans vigorously.

Heavy fighting is in progress to the south of Compiègne, in the neighborhood of Buzancy. So far the French have made no progress there. Villages between Soissons and Bascches, about 14 miles to the east, however, are on fire, leading to the belief that the Germans may intend a further retreat.

FRANK KELLEY HONORED

Frank A. Kelley of Friend Bros. Bakery, is to enter the national service within a few days and to show their appreciation of his patriotism a number of his friends gathered at the home of Police Officer Daniel M. Lynch, 153 Moore street, last evening, and gave him a rousing send-off. The entire soldier was presented a wrist watch by William J. Burbeck, the milk dealer, in behalf of the R.O.F. club, whose headquarters are at Chelmsford and Sheldon streets. The affair was a great surprise to Mr. Kelley as he had been in Lawrence and knew nothing of the farewell planned for him. He was called to city hall this afternoon to be inducted into the military service.

Americans on List

OTTAWA, Ont., July 28.—The following American names appear in today's overseas casualty list:
Wounded: R. C. Saltmarsh, Lakeport, N. H.; J. L. Gill, 65 Eastern avenue, Fall River, Mass.

DEATHS

HUTCHINS—Mrs. Kate C. Hutchins, died July 28 at the Maine General hospital, Portland. She leaves three sons, Roger of New York, Richard of Camp Wadsworth, S. C., and Thomas Hutchins of Portland, two sisters, Mrs. Mary Colby Leach of Seattle, and Mrs. C. M. Campbell of Lowell.

MATRIMONIAL

Mr. Joseph Emile Lapointe and Miss Marie Blanche Gagne were married this morning at a nuptial mass celebrated at 7 o'clock in the private chapel of St. Joseph's rectory, the officiating clergyman being Rev. Athanasius Marion, O. M. I. The bridegroom was Miss Emma Dureault, while the best man was Mr. Henri Lapointe. At the close of the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride, 445 Fletcher street and later the couple left on an extended wedding trip.

Tremblay-Levasseur
A pretty marriage took place this morning at St. Joseph's church, when Mr. Joseph Mederic Tremblay and Miss Marie Emma Rosalida Levasseur, two well known young people of this city, were united in the bonds of matrimony. The ceremony was performed at a nuptial mass celebrated at 7 o'clock by Rev. Armand Caron, O.M.I. During the mass appropriate hymns were sung by the Notre Dame de Lourdes sodality choir of which the bride was a member. The couple was attended by their respective fathers, Messrs. Mederic Tremblay and Joseph Levasseur. At the close of the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bridegroom's parents, 32 Common street and later the couple left on a honeymoon trip.

Pearson-Bengston
Mr. Sven Joel Pearson and Miss Hilda Bengston were married Saturday, at the home of the bridegroom's brother, in Stevens street, the officiating clergyman being Rev. P. E. Nordgren, pastor of the Swedish Lutheran church. The bridegroom was Miss Hilda Johnson, while the best man was Mr. George McFadyen. The couple will make their home in Viola street.

Carman-Grover
Saturday, July 27th at five P. M., at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin G. Morrison, 16 Belrose avenue, their daughter, Eileen Locke Grover, and Captain William Warren Carman, Jr., U. S. A. of Summit, N. J., were united in marriage by Rev. William F. ## Allies Pursue Germans subjecting the sides of the pocket to an enfilading bombardment of great violence.

Americans Gain 15 Miles in Ten Days

From west to east the allied line now runs from Oulchy-le-Chateau along the northern bank of the Ourcq to Fere, thence through Sergy and Goussancourt to south of Ville to Biligny. North of Oulchy and north of Biligny the Germans have maintained their positions stoutly despite the steady hammering of the allies. Sergy, held by the Americans, represents an advance of 18 miles from Chateau-Thierry in 10 days. The forward movement Sunday, was as great as five miles at some points, but averaged slightly more than two miles along the front from Oulchy to Biligny.

Tanks Protect Allied Forces

While the enemy loss in men may not be great, the allies probably will capture many guns and machine guns in addition to supplies and munitions which the Germans have been unable to destroy or move away. Allied losses have been kept at a minimum by the most extensive use of tanks. Cavalry again has taken a hand in the pursuit and low-flying airplanes have been harassing the retreating Germans unceasingly.

Berlin Not Doing Any Boasting

Berlin speaks of "new positions," but does not indicate where they are. The German command may elect to make a stand on strongly prepared positions south of the Vesle. Observers think the Vesle will mark the retirement north of the river, but the river is shallow and runs northwest. The Aisne, however, runs east and west between Soissons and Rheims and with the heights of the Chemin-des-Dames behind it would offer just as strong a defensive position as it did immediately after the first battle of the Marne.

In its official statement, Berlin makes no admission of allied advances either Saturday or Sunday. Reporting on Sunday's operations, it says that the day was quiet except for fighting on the Ourcq.

French Capture 1500

There has been heavy local fighting in the height region between Rheims and Souain, east of the Marne battle-field, but the Germans have held to their position and repulsed German attacks. Prisoners captured here by the French are reported unofficially to total 1500.

FRENCH CAPTURE 400

NORTH OF THE MARNE
PARIS, July 28.—In the fighting north of the Marne, yesterday, 400 prisoners were captured, says the official statement from the war office today. There was no change in the situation during the night. The statement reads: "North of the Marne there was no change in the situation during the night. During the fighting yesterday on this part of the front, we captured about 400 prisoners."

RETURN TO WORK

Several Thousand Strikers Answer Invitation of General Electric Co. at Lynn

LYNN, July 29.—Several thousand of the employees of the General Electric Co., who have been on strike went to work today upon invitation of the company. Crowds gathered in front of the factory gates, and after strike pickets had tried to persuade the men not to return, there was some disorder. The police were obliged to use clubs in several instances, and one was so severely injured that he was taken to a hospital.

The strike has seriously crippled important war work. State and federal mediators have failed to adjust the differences and a committee of the strikers was in Washington today to ask the War Labor board to intercede. In opening the gates, factory officials promised employees that they would be taken back without prejudice.

Shots Are Fired

Later a detachment of police charged the crowd at the River Works. Several shots were fired, one toward the ground, forced the strikers back. Through the lane made by the police the employees entered the factory. A score or more young women employed in the offices of the company fainted inside the mill gates and were taken to their homes. One man was injured and taken to a hospital and seven men and one woman were arrested. There was only minor trouble at the other plant of the company in West Lynn.

less shabby condition. However, Commissioner Morse will start his men cleaning off the street tomorrow and by the end of the week everything should be O.K. for travel.

The Pawtucket Bridge

At the present time the roadway over the new Pawtucket bridge is a mass of cinders and very conspicuously dotted with ruts. The sidewalks and one-time immaculate railings along them have a thick coating of dust and cinders which the wind and passing traffic throw in from the streets. Commissioner Morse says that the question of improving conditions is wholly a matter of time. The Bay State Street Railway is planning to install double car tracks on the structure instead of the single rails that are now there, but they will not be able to do this until next year.

When the new tracks are put in, then the bridge can be paved properly, but if the paving were done now, it would mean that it would all have to be ripped up again when the time came to put in tracks.

Another reason given for the delay in paving is that the grade of the roadway must settle before any permanent paving can be put in. At present the cinders and gravel are settling and that is what is causing the inevitable depressions.

In order to minimize the inconvenience of the dust, Mr. Morse is having the bridge wet down every day and this is helping to offset the unpleasant conditions somewhat.

Marginal Street

Another big job which the street department is working on at present is Marginal street from Wilder street to the power house in Middlesex street. This is being paved with block paving and no base. A lot of heavy traffic for two large industries which are located on the street demands the strongest paving possible and, therefore, the gravel which has been on it has been found inadequate to stand the heavy trucking. The street department men have been on the job for three weeks and last week the actual paving work started.

From Waltham

Mayor Thompson has received a request from Mayor Geo. R. Beal of Waltham asking him to fill out a "questionnaire" as to the amount of wages, hours of employment, etc., of various municipal employees. The mayor has forwarded the desired information.

The Boiler Proposition
Commissioner Francis A. Warnock of the buildings department has already received estimates as to the cost of setting of two boilers in city hall basement and he expects to have further figures as to the actual cost of installing new boilers and an engine to generate power in time for tomorrow's meeting of the municipal council.

Swimming and Swimmers
Yesterday was another big day at the municipal swimming pool on the boulevard and several thousand took advantage of the water. Mayor Thompson has received several more applications for the position of woman swimming instructor but he has not yet made any definite decision. The mayor is planning a series of aquatic events to be held at the pool during the latter part of the season.

More Movies

"Some night" this week, the exact evening to be decided later, there will be a joint community sing and exhibit of moving pictures on the South common. The films for the performance are already on their way to the park commission from Washington, having left the latter city July 23. They will show views of the Canadian northwest and Glacier park and a hip-roaring comedy has also been secured to supplement the more serious phase of the pictures.

Boss Pro Tem

Warren Rioridan, assistant county food administrator, is no longer assistant as he is filling the office of Administrator Edward Fisher during the latter's absence.

Last Call For Water Bills

Four o'clock tomorrow afternoon will be the final chance to pay your water bill at the city treasurer's office if you wish to get the 10 per cent discount allowed those who pay their bills on or before July 30. A large number of bills have been paid already but there are still a few out.

DON'T READ THIS TILL AFTER SUNDOWN

"How hot is it?"
"Well, it's 103 in the sun and 90 in the shade."

Thus spoke the Locks and Canals at 1:30 this afternoon and no mortal speaks with greater veracity than the thermometers of the L. & C. people. What they say is final.

"Is that worse than yesterday?" we asked. Of course, we knew it had to be worse than anything yet recorded this year, but hearken to the complacent voice on the other end of the line:

"Well, no, it was about as bad yesterday. It was 95 in the shade at 3 o'clock. It will be just as bad today unless the wind changes."

So there you are. Today and yesterday are in a neck-and-neck race to see who can get the more hot-headed. There was a consoling breeze today that failed to put in a very audible appearance yesterday and this relieved matters somewhat.

Thermometers all over the city and in the outlying sections reported all sorts of heat records and one had to agree with the reports if only to keep the tale-bearers in good nature.

The weather man says that showers are coming this evening and for that 130,000 Lowell voices will go up in fervent prayer for the individual. The clouds banked up for a while yesterday but there was nothing doing in the way of moisture.

The parks and beaches were filled to capacity and automobilists say that there were a record-breaking number of accidents on the road owing to the large number who were out trying to escape the heat.

AIRPLANE OVER LOWELL THIS MORNING

What is believed to have been an aeroplane was seen flying high over Lowell at between 4:30 and 5 o'clock this morning. Some of the early risers heard a buzzing sound that was decidedly strange to them, and a little later they discovered a speck in the sky that gradually assumed larger proportions until it was seen to be an aeroplane. Railroad men flying out on early trains viewed the aircraft from the Middlesex street depot and it was then barely visible. They said it came from out Chelmsford way and went out towards Billerica, flying high over the carriage shop. The aircraft was also seen by milkmen and they claim that it came from beyond Chelmsford and from the general direction of Ayer. There are no flying machines at Ayer, however, and the nearest airship activity to Lowell is at Squantum. It has been suggested, and it is barely possible, that it was one of the machines engaged in coast patrol duty that took an inland trip just to break the monotony of U-boat searching.

BIG MUNITION STRIKE IN ENGLAND ENDS

COVENTRY, England, July 28.—At a mass meeting today, the strikers in the munition plants decided to resume work immediately.

BIRMINGHAM, England, July 29.—Acting on a resolution passed by their colleagues yesterday, the strikers in munition works here returned to work today. Although their hostility to the embargo on skilled labor is unabated, the promise of an inquiry into the situation has reconciled the strikers to the inevitable. Some of them had a hostile reception from the men and women who had remained at work.

It is expected the action taken by the workers in Coventry and Birmingham will have a soothing effect in other districts where the men have been threatening to lay down their tools.

Mrs. Amedee Archambault, her son, Dewey G. and daughter, Lea as well as Miss Alma Mineau, left yesterday on a ten days' automobile trip through Canada during which they will visit relatives in Louisville, Montreal, Quebec and St. Anne de Beauséjour.

Mr. Borromeo Paradis of Bridgeport, Conn., who recently enlisted in the engineers' corps and who will leave this evening for a training camp in Georgia, was entertained last night at the home of his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Pierre Paradis, 725 Moody street. The young man was presented a wrist watch, a soldier's kit and numerous other gifts, the presentation address being read by his cousin, Miss Gertrude Paradis. An enjoyable evening followed during which luncheon was served and musical numbers were given.

HOT WEATHER HARD ON DRIVE STARTED AGAINST RENT PROFITEERING

As a result of the present hot spell, Lowell people are consuming about two million gallons of water every day more than they do when the temperature is normal, according to Commissioner George H. Brown of the water department. Water, like other useful commodities, is beginning to get scarce, and while there is no occasion for alarm, nevertheless, Mr. Brown advises people to waste no more than they are obliged to because there are a great many calls for water for hospitals, wetting down the streets, etc., that have to be answered.

Commissioner Brown had members of the fire department wetting down the territory surrounding all the local hospitals Saturday night and last evening and also the following places: Aiken street and Lilley avenue and adjoining sections. Coburn street and Lakeview avenue, Bridge and First streets, Merrimack square and vicinity, including the French street district, Stackpole and East Merrimack streets including Davidson and other nearby sections, Andover and Fayette streets, Towers corner, Lawrence and Waverly streets, Winter street, Bosford square, Davis square, Moore and Gorham streets, U. S. Cartridge Co. square, Plain and Chelmsford streets, Lincoln square, Howard and Chelmsford streets, Pine and Westford streets, Middlesex street, Depot square, Liberty square, section near Fletcher and Davidson streets, Broadway and School streets, Pawtucket square and Merrimack and Cabot streets.

These districts will be wet down every evening after sunset as long as the warm spell continues. The youngsters more than enjoy the flushing and the older people also get a lot of benefit from it.

OLDEST OFFICE BOY—HE'S NEVER LATE AND HE NEVER LOAFES

When an office-boy can't get off to go to the circus with the old stall about "grandmother sick," he's a kid out of luck. That's the fix Grant I. Taggart is in. He's 39 years old—the most venerable office-boy in the world, bar none. And office boys, his age, can't be called to give their side of the story and if they can show cause for any unreasonable rent increase. Some of Miss Balzer's duties are: Compilation of a card index of tenants whose rents have been increased in the last three years. Compilation of a roster of members of the proposed Tenants' league of Cleveland.

It will be her duty to gather all information to establish if the landlord is justified in an increase in rent. Miss Balzer has been a stenographer in the city clerk's office for 14 years.

To Divide City
Committee members propose to divide the city into wards with an enrollment officer in charge of each to obtain members. Dwellings have been divided into two classes, the first supplying heat and the other with no heat. This will help in figuring the percentage of cost of maintenance.

Landlords who built their houses during the pre-war period will not be allowed to charge as high rent as the house built since that time.

"All right," replied Taggart. "Perhaps it will release a younger man for active service 'over there'."

He got the job, and Alberger says he's the best office-boy he ever had. He's always on the job.

A quarter of a century ago he was a member of the legislature and served three terms as Shasta county clerk and once as clerk of the supreme court. He is now a candidate for the legislature from Oakland, his present California home.

Taggart, after an active life as stage driver and miner and politician in northern California, tried to enlist at the outbreak of the war, but, for some reason or other, was refused, although he told the recruiting officer that if they put him on a horse, he'd "stick there till we get to Berlin."

Shunning inactivity, he went to W. R. Alberger, vice-president and general
